AMES MONEY IN LAW CLASH

KIN OF LATE GOVERNOR OPENS FIGHT TO REGAIN FORTUNE WILLED HER

"My poor mother was still alive all the time they were arguing with me as to what I should do with her estate."

This statement was made today by Mrs. Anna Roy Chatman Bellian, granddaughter of the late Governor Oliver Ames, in explaining her suit against her uncle, Oakes Ames, and her two marriage-aunts, Mrs. Blanche Ames, wife of Oakes Ames, and her sister, Mrs. Evelyn Hall.

In her suit, filed in Sinsons Court in an attempt to recover the estate she claims she was induced to sign away, Mrs. Bellian charges that great pressure was brought upon her while she was ill and weak and exhausted through sitting up with her dying mother.

Also, in her papers accompanying the suit, that has stirred Boston society folk, Mrs. Bellian sheds some light on the heretofore mysterious suicides of two prominent and wealthy Boston men, both trustees of the Oliver Ames estate, who shot

MYSTERY PHONE CALLS IN MISSING GIRL HUNT

Mystery which deepens with each passing day, and which has baffled Boston police, surrounds the disappearance of 15-year-old Alice E. Broderick, Hyde Park high school student, on May 20.

For a week past, mysterious telephone calls have been received almost daily by Hyde Park police, telling where the girl may be found. Similar calls are received daily at the home of the mother, Mrs. Mary Broderick, No. 23 Water street, Hyde Park.

Each telephone clew, when run down by police, has proved false, but so keen are the detectives to find the girl that every report is thoroughly investigated.

One call came from Reading, the

WADSWORTH EXALTS 'LINDY' AND AIR MAIL

A tribute to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, New York-Paris flight hero; assertion that commercial aviation has come to stay, and that Boston Airport will become a terminal for freight and passenger air lines east, west, north and south, were features of an address by Ellot Wadsworth, representing Mayor Nichols, at the opening exercises of Air Mail Week anniversary held on Boston Common this noon.

Several thousand persons jammed the space about the Parkman bandstand, where the Navy Yard band tried to make itself heard above the roar of airplanes that soared overhead.

It was the official opening of Boston's air mail week, marking the

SEES HIS MOTHER SLAIN IN GUN DUEL WITH BEAU

New Orleans, June 27 (I.N.S.)—Returning from a dance to the woman's home on Lake Pontchartrain, Mrs. Nora Debuc, 42, and Earl Scully, 33, fought a gun duel late Sunday in which the woman was killed and the man wounded fatally, dying today.

Mrs. Debuc's son, Asolphe, 20, ran from the house to see his mother fall dead on the porch.

The son told police he had accompanied his mother, a widow, and Scully, a frequent caller, to the picnic dance and that there had been no quarrel. On their return he went to sleep. He was awakened by the shots.

TROOPS TO HUNT FOR SALISBURY SLAYER SUSPECT ON ISLAND

Rockland, Me., June 27.—Probability that the National Guard may be called upon to ferret out George Taylor, sought as the slayer of blonde Stella Kale at Salisbury Peach, Mass., loomed today as a hunt began on Clark's Island for a man who has been frightening women.

It is believed the stranger, whose insistent demands for food have resulted in the womenfolk barring their homes, may be the wanted itinerant barber.

Three armed Coast Guards kept an all-night vigil at the bridges leading from here to the island and when the stranger failed to appear a conference was called on the advisability of calling out the local National Guard company for an island search.

Taylor was reported, following the murder, as probably headed for Maine, and this led to supposition that the ragged stranger of the island demands may be the barber.

Meanwhile today, inhabitants of the towns and villages of Durham, Lee, Nottingham and Madbury, in New Hampshire, armed with shotguns, were engaged in a man hunt for Taylor in that section, where fifteen persons have furnished the police with descriptions tallying with that of the fugitive.

Police circulars of Taylor have been circulated to the farmers describing Taylor fully.

A new angle was given the hunters to work on also today when Milo Litch, a farmhand employed by Otis Korhan of Smith street, Gardner, Mass., came to Dover expressly for the purpose of telling the police about an itinerant barber he met at 5:30 a. m. Saturday.

Litch said the man's face carried a three weeks' growth of beard and that the stranger himself carried a black handled revolver.

In general description, the man answered that of the Taylor description as published in the newspapers, according to Litch.

"He asked me what town he was in," the farmhand said, "and where he could get something to eat. Then he asked me if there was a chance of getting a job in a barber shop in Gardner."

Every man in the 12 square mile woodland territory which embraces the five communities is prepared to shoot if the fugitive balks at surrender. Five girls were first to put the police on the trail of the man suspected of being the itinerant barber and "corpse hooter." They are Vera Woynar, Mary and Antonia Stye and Sophie and Helen Szacik, all at Newmarket.

"We saw him near Little Diamond bridges to Durham. He jumped from the bushes on the bank of the river where we were swimming," said Helen Szacik.

"He said 'hello, you girls are brave to be alone here where the fellow who killed a girl in Salisbury is hanging around.'

"He said he was arrested in Lawrence for the murder but that he was released in two days.

"The man we saw was about 40 years old. His eyes seemed to bulge from his head. He wore a blue shirt and while talking to us he held his hand over his mouth.

Matthew Kartaszewicz, who lives on the Packer's Falls road between Newmarket and Durham is another who said he saw a man answering Taylor's description.

"He suddenly popped out of the bushes and asked me if they had caught the man who murdered the girl at Salisbury Beach. I said that it did not know and he went back into the woods.

The suspected Taylor next appeared at the home of E. E. Davis, who lives on a back woods road in Durham. There he asked Davis' housekeeper for a clean can and some hot water. "I want the water to treat my neck," he said.

Two boys were next to see the man the posse is seeking. They are Luigi and Lamont Beaudet, 17 and 12, of Durham.

Former Deputy Sheriff Arloch W. Griffith, who lives in the outskirts of Dover, was the next to notify police that he saw a man answering Taylor's description.

A chauffeur named Edward Varley, employed at New Hampshire State College at Durham, telephoned Dover police that the fugitive was "washing up" in a brook near the college. Before police were on the scene the man hurried into the woods and lost to his pursuers.

Five of the victims were children struck as they were playing in the streets.

1 HURT IN 'GAS' TANK BLAST

Providence, June 27.—With a roar that could be heard miles away, a 1,000-gallon gasoline tank that was believed to be empty and free of fumes, exploded in a lot on Dudley street, when boys at play swung a lighted broom close to the opening in the head of the tank.

One of the boys, Francis Green, aged 10, of Plain street, was badly burned when the explosion set fire to his clothing. He is at the Rhode Island Hospital, and will likely recover, a garage man having smothered the burning clothing.

That any of the boys escaped is little short of a miracle. So terrific was the explosion that the head of the drum was blown 50 feet in the air, tearing a great gap in the eaves of the Lundgren Iron Works, nearby.

The tank was placed on the lot by the Gady Moving & Storage Company two weeks ago.

It was regarded as harmless, but it is believed a small quantity of gasoline was unnoticed and in the heat of the sun this generated a highly volatile gas which exploded when the burning broom was brought near the opening in the tank.

Windows several blocks away were shattered by the force of the explosion.

CONTEST LOADS.

In all some fifty of the passengers are furnishing "contest loads" for the planes as required by the regulations. The "loads" vary from 400 to 1,500 pounds, according to the piston displacements of the engines.

A system of scoring on points, somewhat intricate to the lay mind, will determine the winner. With varying contest loads and motors of various piston displacement, a race for speed is not a primary factor, although each plane is required to maintain at least 85 per cent. of its registered speed capacity on each leg of the tour. Efficiency in takeoff and landing and general performance form the basis of the scoring formula.

The planes will remain overnight at Buffalo, proceeding tomorrow to Geneva and Schenectady, and will reach Boston Wednesday. The following two weeks will take the flyers to a score of cities over a route of more than 4,000 miles.

Water to Be Turned Into Wine; It's a Great Secret

New York, June 27.—Water is to be turned into wine at Columbia University—into champagne, sherry and port—if claims made in behalf of two Belgian visitors are correct. Having promised to destroy their product, C. Brufaese, a lawyer, and George Vingerhoets, steamship officer, have obtained permission of prohibition authorities to demonstrate in the university's chemical laboratories a secret substance which, combined with water and sugar, it is asserted, makes wine of 1 per cent. alcohol in three days and 18 per cent. in 30 days.

police being told the girl could be found there. A day's search by detectives in that town failed to reveal any trace of her.

Next day a mysterious call came from Lowell, telling the police the girl was there. Again detectives were sent on a wild-goose chase. Then came calls from Haverhill and Lawrence, but all led to the same result—nothing.

Since the girl disappeared there has never been less than two detectives working on the case, and often Captain Robert Grant of the Hyde Park station has had as high as a dozen men seeking her.

A poor showing in her school report was believed at first to have been responsible for her leaving home. As the mystery deepens, however, police fear she may have been the victim of kidnaping.

Although only 15, she is matured and could easily pass for 18 or 20, police said. She is light, with blue eyes, had a boyish bob of her blonde hair and there is a slight scar on each cheek. She is 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs 140 pounds.

When last seen she wore a blue silk dress, gray coat with muscovite colored fur, a gray toque, black shoes and gray stockings.

Boston Common fairly rocked with applause for "Lindy."

Continuing, Mr. Wadsworth said "Boston is becoming used to using the air mail and Boston merchants are finding it desirable to spend 5 cents more per letter to save sixty hours in time between here and the Pacific Coast and the same proportion to other points in the West.

MAKES REPORT ON LOAN ORDER OF MAYOR

The Finance Commission today, in a report sent to the City Council, recommends that if Mayor Nichols' pending loan order for $720,000 for a new central fire station in the West End is considered, not more than $360,000 be expended on the site and $356,000 for the erection of the new building.

If the suggestions of the Finance Commission are carried out the city will save $100,000. The mayor set the outside figure of $460,000 for the land and buildings and $356,000 for the fire station. The location was the site of the Old Revere House in Bowdoin Square.

As soon as the loan order reached the Council chamber it became known that Warren F. Freeman, city real estate expert, was part owner of the land and buildings which were assessed for $260,000. He, with two other real estate experts, John C. Kiley, who is at present in Europe, and Joseph D. Dilworth, were hired by the city to make reports on several sites selected by them.

According to the report of the Finance Commission, the Revere House lot is owned by a Massachusetts corporation called the Revere Building, Incorporated. One-half interest in this corporation is owned by Mr. Freeman. In his written report he did not disclose to the Mayor that he was interested in this lot.

The report further states, "Holding the position of real estate agent of the city, it was the duty of Mr. Freeman to make sure, beyond a doubt, that his private interest in any site recommended was known at the time of the report. It is obvious that he should not represent the city further in obtaining a site for the fire station in this district."

The Finance Commission hired the Boston Real Estate Exchange to make an official appraisal and in the opinion of the appraisal committee the fair valuation of the property is $306,000.

FLORIDA TAKES HARVARD MEN ON CRUISE

Nineteen Harvard freshmen were sailed down a bit today when they set sail aboard the U. S. S. Florida for a fifteen-day training cruise, supplementing their course in naval science and tactics at Cambridge.

The freshmen are of the Harvard students in training for commissions in the Naval Reserve at graduation.

Also on the battleship when it steamed out of Boston were fifteen Yale freshmen who are on the last end of their similar cruise, and ten students of Northwestern University, who are just starting.

The Yale students will go ashore at New London, the first stop, and return to New Haven, bronzed from their cruise through Southern Atlantic waters, while the Harvard and Northwestern men will continue on with the ship to Annapolis to spend July 4 at the Naval Academy.

From Annapolis the battleship will carry the students farther south and at the end of fifteen days will return them to Boston.

Commander Stewart, assistant professor of naval science and tactics at Harvard, accompanied the Crimson sailors.

For one-half hour the East Boston fire battalion had a stubborn blaze to battle aboard the three-masted schooner, Indian Freighter, which for the past year has been tied up at the Atlantic Works wharf.

The fire, which was in the hold of the vessel, started from an unknown cause. Because of the proximity of lumber wharfs and buildings the firemen took no chances of the blaze spreading and practically flooded the hold.

BEST VIEW OF COMET TONIGHT AT 9 O'CLOCK

The best view of the comet Pons-Wincke may be obtained at 9 o'clock tonight from Corey Hill and the Blue Hills. To find the comet look south, just outside of the Milky Way. It will be a fuzzy object two-thirds the size of a full moon with a bright dot in it.

The phenomenon will be viewed all night until it gets down into the haze of the horizon. At the Harvard observatories, where photographs are to be made, Professor Willard J. Fisher said today that the glare of the electric bulbs which appear after the hour when the comet can be seen will prevent any appreciable view of the object to the naked eye.

But if you want to get some kind of a view of it, the high spots are the best.

Leon Campbell, also of the Observatory, said today he got a great view of the comet in Springfield, Vt. He described it as a "fuzzy object with no appreciable tail, only a slight elongation, moving in a southeasterly direction night to night, a distance equal to the width of the moon."

Comet Nearing Earth at 18½ Miles a Second

Washington, June 27 (A.P.)—Astronomers at the naval observatory failed to discern anything unusual about the progress of the Pons-Winnecke comet as it approached within 42,500,000 miles of the earth today.

The comet was traveling in the same general direction as the earth, the observers said, although it is gaining 10 degrees each day on this planet as it hurtles through the sky.

During the observation it was 20 degrees east and a little south of the star Altair, they said. Its speed was estimated at 18½ miles per second.

The Japanese delegation received instructions from Tokio authorizing the delegates to discuss the question.

Hitherto the Japanese delegation stood with the American delegation on the declaration that the British proposals relating to capital ships were settled at the Washington conference and were outside the agenda of the present conference.

"Hollow Victory" for British, Says Washington

By GEORGE R. HOLMES,
International News Correspondent

Washington, June 27.—The British have won a hollow victory in persuading the Japanese to agree to their proposal to discuss the capital ship question at the Geneva naval conference, according to the viewpoint of the American government, expressed today.

The American view is that capital ships were dealt with and the question settled at the Washington conference in 1921. The agreement there reached was embodied in the five-power treaty, which still has until 1931 to run before it can be revised.

Five countries are signatory to that treaty, the United States, Great Britain, Japan, Italy and France. Neither France nor Italy is participant in the Geneva conference. Hence, it was said, no revision of the 1921 treaty can be attempted at Geneva because of the absence of two of the signers.

Ford Notes 3 Years' Improvements as Planes Hop Off

Detroit, June 27 (I.N.S.).—Henry Ford, who was present with his son Edsel at the take-off of the National Air Tour, commented on the wonderful improvement in the planes starting today over those of three years ago.

"This difference," said Ford, "may not be apparent to the casual eye because the improvements have been largely mechanical and are contained within the planes themselves. Nevertheless, they are there."

CHAMBERLIN AND LEVINE IN HOP TO POLISH CAPITAL

London, June 27 (I.N.S.). — The American transatlantic aviators, Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, hopped off from Marienbad, Czecho-Slovakia, today in their monoplane Columbia for Warsaw, according to a Central News dispatch received here. The fliers took off in a rainstorm.

son M. Patrick, chief of the Army Air Service, who, the Examiner declares, will be a passenger.

In Honolulu the Navy threw a cloak of secrecy about the preparations of Richard Grace, former Naval Reserve officer, whose transpacific plane was locked in a guarded hangar at Pearl Harbor after having made an apparently successful test flight.

SMITH IN TESTS

Ernest Smith, local civilian flier, has his plane ready for test flights today after working feverishly with a large force of mechanics.

Although the chances of Grace and his navigator, Lieutenant Koger, for a take-off from the Hawaii end today were unknown here, Smith was conceded to have the best chance to be the first to get into the air.

The Oakland municipal airport, where a special 7,000 foot runway has been constructed, was ready to accommodate both the army plane and Smith for their take-offs.

CHIANG'S ULTIMATUM DISCUSSED AT HANKOW

Shanghai, June 27 (A.P.).—A wireless dispatch from Hankow reports that the radical Nationalist government there is discussing the recent ultimatum of Chiang Kai Shek, the moderate Nationalist leader, whose headquarters are at Nanking.

This ultimatum demands, among other things, disbandment of all labor unions, and dismissal of 20 Russian advisers and certain Chinese Communists.

AMES HEIRESS ACCUSES KIN IN SUIT

themselves within two months of each other.

These two men were Gilmer Clapp, reputed millionaire, former secretary to Governor Ames, and head of the American Pneumatic Service Co., and Charles M. Hayden of Medford, trustee of the estate.

According to the charges, Clapp and Hayden had charge of that part of the estate originally of Governor Ames that was to have gone to Mrs. Bellian.

"My grandfather," said Mrs. Bellian today through her attorney, Jesse S. Crook, "left a portion of his estate to my mother, that portion to be divided among her children at her death.

"Two years ago, in May, 1925, I was notified of the condition of my mother, dying of cancer at her home in Boston. I was living in New York and it was a short time after I was married.

"On receipt of the telegram, I rushed to Boston. I was excited, could not sleep on the way over, and when I got there I stayed up the first day at my mother's bedside.

SOUGHT BY AUNT.

"While there, Mrs. Blanche Ames, an aunt by marriage, came to the house and appeared very solicitous as to my comfort. She said, 'You must not stay here. You must come to my home and rest.'

"I went with her to No. 355 Commonwealth avenue and just as I was preparing to retire for the night Mrs. Blanche Ames and Mrs. Evelyn Hall, her sister, entered my room and talked with me about having Oakes Ames act as trustee of the estate which I would inherit if my mother died.

"My mother was still living, but was in a serious condition. I told them I did not want to talk about any estate then, that I wanted sleep and rest.

"WHAT SHE MUST DO."

"I said, 'Mother is not dead yet and I do not know that I am going to get anything.' They both went out of the room and I was in bed perhaps fifteen minutes when Evelyn Hall again came into the room and said, 'Your uncle, Oakes, is downstairs and he wants to see you.'

"When I got downstairs Mrs. Blanche Ames and Evelyn ushered me into the library, where Mr. Ames was with another man. He was introduced to me as a lawyer.

"They all remained in the room with me and then they proceeded to tell me practically what I must do. They told me I was to put any estate I might receive in trust with Oakes Ames; that all the Ames people had done it and that I must do it. Mr. Ames said I should have $5,000 at once.

"I again told them I could not be bothered with any estates that night and that any talk of an estate must be had at a future time. My poor mother was still living all the time they were arguing with me as to what I should do.

"The next day, while I was at the bedside of my mother, Oakes Ames sent his automobile to the house and I was told that I would have to go to his home at once.

"When I got there, Oakes Ames and the lawyer were there and they placed a paper in front of me and told me to 'Sign here,' pointing out a line. They said, 'Everything is all right.'

"I did not read the paper, but I signed it. Two days later my mother died. Perhaps it was two weeks later that I received the $5,000.

"I don't know what the total valuation of the Oliver Ames estate was. So far as I know there has never been an accounting."

In the thousand-question interrogatory filed supplementary to the suit and demanding answers from Oakes Ames, under oath, he is asked if it is not true that at the time of the alleged coercion of Mrs. Bellian she was only twenty-five years old.

GLOUCESTER SCHOONER FLOATED BY HIGH TIDE

Woods Hole, June 27 (A.P.).—The Gloucester fishing schooner Good Luck, which grounded on Naushon Island near Tarpaulin Cove in the fog early Sunday morning, floated free at high tide a few hours later. She was undamaged.

"One-Eyed Connelly" Crashes the Gate Once Too Often

Liverpool, June 27 (A.P.).—James Connelly, known in the United States as "One-Eyed Connelly," the supreme gate crasher, who boasted on leaving New York it would take a whole police squad to keep him from seeing the Mickey Walker-Tommy Milligan fight free, is now being detained here as a person likely to become a public charge.

One mark looking British aliens officer interrupted Connelly's gate-crashing career when he arrived here aboard the Scythia.

"Looks like my trip is a washout," said Connelly with a sickly smile.

BEANS AND COD MAKE BIG HIT WITH TEXANS

Handsome, smiling and blond, Dan Moody, youthful Governor of Texas, who became a national figure when he smashed the political machine of "Ma" Ferguson and husband, "Jim," today hobnobbed with Boston captains of industry—ate baked beans and planked cod and absorbed New England "viewpoint" gleaned from half a dozen sources.

The Governor dodged questions concerning the "Ferguson situation," prohibition and his own ambitions to occupy the White House—but he was willing at all times to talk about Texas.

At the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Governor Moody was presented with a big pot of Boston baked beans by Vice-President E. C. Johnson.

"I'm sure glad to get Texas grown beans bake in Boston," was the smiling reply of the Governor to the gift.

Governor Moody came to Boston at the head of 125 Texas bankers, lumber and oil barons, newspaper men, planters and businessmen, who are on a good-will tour of the country.

The party has been on the road for two weeks and when "Governor Dan" arrived in Boston he was, to use his own phrase, "about all in."

He went to bed at the Statler Hotel and was so exhausted this morning that he couldn't get out in time to lead the delegation of Texans at City Hall to greet the Mayor.

Possibly the Texas executive knew that Mayor Nichols was absent from the city, but at any rate he lay in bed recuperating while his fellow boosters, headed by Dr. E. P. Brooks, president of Baylor University, called at City Hall and were greeted by President John J. Hefernan of the City Council, who is acting Mayor.

When Governor Moody appeared at the Chamber of Commerce for the official reception, he was so boyish and unobtrusive in his appearance that not a Boston business man could recognize him as head of the party.

A reporter, who had previously met the governor, saved an embarrassing situation by presenting the Governor to Mr. Johnson.

Governor Moody, as he stood before Boston's assembled business men, almost outdid Charley Lindbergh. The Governor, like the Flying Colonel, is extremely tall, extremely blonde and boyish, and has a wonderfully infectious smile. His features are cast more in the mould of a he-man hero of the movies than are Lindbergh's, but there is a striking similarity between the two.

PONY EXPRESS REVIVED FOR COOLIDGE

Rapid City, S. D., June 27 (A.P.).—The famous Pony Express of the gold rush days will be revived to bring an invitation to President Coolidge to visit Wyoming.

Some time during July, it was disclosed at the Summer White House, a relay of 23 riders—all survivors of the Pony Express, is to make the trip from Cheyenne to the State Game Lodge, following as closely as possible the old route from the Cheyenne-Deadwood trail.

From rider to rider an invitation from Wyoming, written on calf skin, will be handed until the last has placed it in the hands of Mr. Coolidge. If feasible, the ceremony at the lodge will be witnessed by Governor Emmerson of Wyoming and Governor Bulow of South Dakota. The idea of the revival of the Pony Express is credited to Cheyenne citizens.

The President has arranged to meet two pilgrimages, one to leave the Yellowstone area and pick up delegations enroute to Rapid City, another to leave Chicago, both to meet at the State Game Lodge July 20. The delegations will comprise members of the Atlantic Yellowstone Pacific Highway Association.

BABY SOLD FOR $75; WOMAN IS ARRESTED

New Orleans, June 27 (A.P.).—As an outgrowth of the arrest of Mrs. T. P. Hodkins, midwife, for the alleged sale of a 3 weeks old baby for $75, the district attorney's office here today began an investigation of all maternity hospitals.

The casual manner in which Mrs. Hodkins bickered over the details of the selling as well as certain confidential information given District Attorney Eugene Stanley following an investigation led to the belief that child sale is no uncommon occurrence in New Orleans, Mr. Stanley said.

Already the contest has reached proportions beyond the editor's expectations. When he promised the Kid Leather Tanners' Association that he would co-operate in a quest for the most perfect feminine foot in all New England he had little idea that his quest would prove so exhaustive.

A photograph of the entrant's feet is absolutely the only requirement for admission to the contest.

For those who wish to avail themselves of the expert skill of the Boston Evening American's staff of photographers the American studio has been thrown open. A photographer will be found on duty morning, afternoon or evening to assist any entrant in posing for contest photographs. There is absolutely no charge for such aid.

The New England miss or matron whose feet are judged by the contest committee to be the most perfect of all in the contest will be awarded the title of Miss New England of the perfect Feet, a gold medal emblematic of her title, a cash prize of $100 and a pair of as exquisite kid shoes as it is possible for kid skin craftsmen to fashion.

A silver medal will be given by the Kid Leather Tanners to the possessor of the next best feet in the contest, with $25 in gold and a pair of lustrous, ebony kid skin pumps. A third prize will consist of a bronze medal by the Kid Tanners, $15 in gold and a chic pair of modish white kid skin shoes.

The fourth prize will consist of $10 in gold and a pair of finest quality kid skin shoes.

Twenty-one other prizes will be distributed, all of stylish and beautiful kid shoes.

All of the 25 prize winners will receive an order on Hovey & Co. for a pair of these stylish and beautiful kid shoes designed by L. Miller & Sons.

FIREMEN FLEE FROM DEATH

Pantucket, R. I., June 27.—Crashing floors nearly took several firemen down to death with them early today during a $35,000 fire that swept through offices and stores in the Beswick Block, Broad, Exchange and Summer streets, downtown.

The firemen were fighting the flames from the head of a stairway when the floor beneath them rocked. They were ordered to flee, and they had just barely scrambled to safety when the floor above, crashing down, took their floor with it into the basement.

It is believed the fire started in the basement of the William Ivenstasch drug store and ran along through cellars of other stores before beginning a climb up through the three-story building.

Several small explosions from hot-air occurred during the blaze.

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., June 27.—Commander Richard E. Byrd announced shortly after noon today that it is extremely unlikely that the monoplane America will be able to start for Paris tomorrow because of new storms raging over the proposed line of flight all the way to Europe.

Adverse winds, which would cut down the speed of the plane from 15 to 25 miles an hour, are also prevailing.

WIFE EFFECTED DAUDET ESCAPE

Paris, June 27 (A.P.).—Leon Daudet, the Royalist leader, and M. Delest, another Royalist, and the Communist Semard, for whose benefit the gates of Sante Prison were opened on Saturday, were still at liberty today and the government was seeking a clue as to how the wardens were tricked into releasing them.

The police version is that a Royalist, representing himself as M. Sarraut, Minister of Interior, gave orders to Director Catry of the prison that the three prisoners be released and they were allowed to walk out.

Catry has been dismissed, but the newspapers insist he is being made the scapegoat; that the blame lies higher up.

Semard appeared at a meeting of the Communist party at St. Denis. The government says it will allow him ten days to surrender before taking steps to rearrest him.

One version of the break is that it came about through the fear of Mme. Daudet over what would happen to her husband since a nearby restaurant from which he received his food had changed hands. She pleaded to the headquarters of l'Action Francaise to devise a means for securing his release, whereupon the plot was hatched, it is said.

MILLS APPEALS TO GRAND JURY ON TRANSFER

New York, June 27 (A.P.).—Chester P. Mills announced today that he had asked grand jury investigation of the whole situation which resulted in his transfer from his post as prohibition administrator of New York and the suspension of his assistant, Augustus Heise, after charges of third degree methods had been made against Heise.

"My transfer doesn't mean a thing to me," Mills said. "But I hate to see Heise let out without pay on the testimony of a man of the type of Briggs."

The Briggs he meant is Albert Briggs, an East Indian, now on trial with four former prohibition agents for conspiracy to collect bribes.

"In order to fully justify Heise," said Mills, "I have asked that this affair be investigated by a grand jury."

AIR PASSENGER SERVICE AUG. 1 ACROSS U. S.

San Francisco, June 27 (A.P.).—Transcontinental airplane passenger service, covering the distance from San Francisco to New York in about 30 hours, will be made available to the public about August 1, when the air mail lines operating between the Pacific and the Atlantic will have been completely taken over by commercial organizations.

Plans for the service were announced here today by W. G. Herron, vice-president of the Boeing Air Transport, Inc., which, next Friday, will take over the air mail between here and Chicago. After the company's pilots have made their regular trips over the San Francisco-Chicago route, regular passenger service between those cities will be inaugurated.

1,600-POUND LOADS.

The Chicago-New York leg of the passenger service will be made available as soon as the National Air Transport, Inc., takes over the air mail service of that section, Mr. Herron said. This will be about a month after the San Francisco-Chicago line is established.

Mr. Herron announced the San Francisco-Chicago planes would be equipped to carry two passengers and mail and baggage to a maximum load of 1,600 pounds. Scheduled operating time is 22½ hours for the full route. Twenty-five planes, each capable of making 130 miles an hour, will be put into service on the opening day.

WITH LIGHTED CABINS.

The planes are equipped with a lighted cabin containing a reclining seat similar to those in day coaches. Each landing gear is fitted with brakes, enabling the planes to make quick stops after touching the ground. They carry each 100 gallons of gasoline, enough for four hours of flying, and a 420-horsepower motor.

The San Francisco-Chicago line will make passenger connections with the Los Angeles-Seattle air line at San Francisco; with Salt Lake City-Pasco, Wash., line and the Salt Lake-Los Angeles line at Salt Lake City; with the Cheyenne-Pueblo line at Cheyenne and with air lines centering in Chicago.

Reciprocal arrangements between various lines probably will be made under which a passenger may be able to buy through tickets, Herron said.

LINDY'S FIRST FLYING JOB WAS DOING STUNTS AT FAIRS

MY PLANE AND I

From the Lips of Lindy Himself—Early Flying Days

By WILLIAM HILLMAN

(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

He, who was to be called the "Lone Eagle of the Air," began his flying career with the awkwardness of an eagle learning to fly.

What a picture he must have been—a long, gangling, rustic fellow, bashful to the point of seeming a humpkin! Lindbergh, student at the Lincoln Aircraft Company at Lincoln, Nebraska, to enroll as a student-flyer.

"I rode a motorcycle to Lincoln from Little Falls, Minnesota, to go to the aviation school," Lindy said.

It was an old battered affair, the ghost of what was once a motorcycle.

Those who were inclined to laugh at his appearance soon realized how serious Lindy was. No student worked harder. Lindy was no longer the rambling student of precarious schoolboy days going from school to school, attending about fourteen in all.

"I went through the regular ground training and study of the engine," Lindbergh said, "and soon I was taken up for my first flight with my instructor. It was great fun."

Lindy, however, was not permitted to pilot the plane himself for some time.

"I made my first flight as a pilot in April, 1922," said Lindbergh. "I have flown through thirty-five States, Mexico, that is along the Mexican border, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Ireland, France, Belgium and England.

As soon as Lindbergh felt certain he had learned all that could be learned at the school, and that he was capable to pilot an airplane, he left.

"GYPSY FLIER."

"I looked around to see what I could do," he said.

He then started on a career of "gypsy" flying, which was to have a great influence on future years.

Lindy did wing walking and parachute jumping from first motored planes. He threw fear into the hearts of backwoods and farmer folk by walking out on the wing of a plane cruising along at terrific speed and at sharp angles.

Then "Slim" would pilot the plane and, with that uncanny bird instinct of his, make his plane do what birds never attempt, turns and loops and dizzy maneuvers. He would zoom close to buildings and the ground with that terrific speed he always likes to travel.

Even in the years that followed, when Lindy became the careful, conservative pilot, he would occasionally become the stunt pilot.

Low into the dirty after his arrival in Paris climb the sky in a French plane he had never seen before. He was just able to scrimp his long, lanky body into it.

He flew over Le Bourget for a few minutes. It was early morning, the sun coming up a golden ball over the distant roofs.

Then Lindy pointed the plane into a sharp ascent, executed a loop, straightened out, gained a little more altitude, sideslepped, circled the field and began to make his plane execute a typical "Lindy dance," a series of daring turns and spins and maneuvers during which he looked for landing.

FRENCH OFFICERS GASPED.

The French aviators and officers on the field gasped. What daring "fool" was this to try such stunts in a plane unknown to the pilot.

Lindy was not happy, however, until he could own a plane of his own. After several months of "gypsy" flying and parachuting, Lindy succeeded in getting enough money together to buy a plane.

The U. S. Army was holding a bargain sale of "second-hand" planes at Americus, Georgia.

Lindy purchased a biplane, one that had seen much service but was still in good shape.

"I got a lot of good flying out of it," Lindy said.

But Lindy went back to the "home town," Little Falls, flying his plane. He took a lot of neighbors up for rides, carried a lot further afield to several sections of the State helping him campaign for Governor.

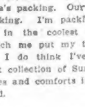
Shopping with Priscilla Price

Dear Anne:

Everybody's packing. Barbara's packing. Our friends are packing. I'm packing. So curl up in the coolest corner and watch me put my treasures in, for I do think I've found the best collection of Summer necessities and comforts in New England.

Take the Luggage

This suit case, hat box and even my purse. Where could you find anything smarter? And yet you will hardly believe the prices.



The Boston Baggage Company, at 517 Washington Street, are holding their twelfth anniversary sale with leather goods of every kind at marvelous reductions. The envelope purse was but $2.95—fine alligator calf, and the bill fold of genuine snake skin, lined with heavy moire silk, with mirror and inner purse and the popular back strap. It comes in tan, gray, black, blonde, red, green and blue. The week-end suit case is $2.65, marked with your initials and delivered. It is 22 inches long, of black enameled duck, with leather corners and leather sewed-on handles. The lining is cretonne with the deep pocket in the corner. And the hat box to match is but $2.45. Bound in either black or blonde leather, cretonne lined, and roomy enough for anything you wish to put into it.

A Ten-Cent Sale

Starts today on curtains at the Seasonal Sales Store, 54 Chauncy Street. Over 10,000 pair—fresh from the factory—with a remarkable price offering for the first pair and 10c on the second. People will be waiting at the doors to buy them by the dozen.

Thirty varieties to choose from. Mercerized voile, hard twist voile, French voile, figured marquisette, dotted marquisette, block dot, figured dot—$5 curtains with a price of 10c for the second pair, $4 curtains, $3, $2, $1.50 and $1.00 and only Ten Cents for the second pair. What a boon for the rush before the final opening of the cottages. What a help to secure them for our city homes now, and have them ready for Fall. And they are good curtains—beautiful, well-made curtains—ruffled, valanced, flounced, hemstitched, lace edged—cottage sets, panels and sash curtains. Gracious—supposing you had skipped this item and missed out on this sale.

With Sheer Delight

I pack my hosiery and underwear. Did you ever see such delicious hosiery? Regular $2.50 black bottom with that slenderizing pine tree pointed heel for $1.85 a pair, three pair for $5.50, at Landfield's, 8 Winter Street. And the extra sheer $2.50 black bottom hosiery with the straight back heel at the same price. They come in the French mode, gives the ever-so-little blush, atmosphere and stone, with the black heel and in nearly all the other colors with heels of the same shade in deeper tone. But there are only a thousand pair of them offered at this price, and that's a limited number. The semi-chiffons, really service weight chiffons, are $1.85 a pair, with the free repair service included. But I'm not going to tell you the prices on the underwear. I want you to go to Landfield's, and compare the quality with what the other shops offer. For it's quality that makes the price a bargain, after all.

There's Always Room

For a printed chiffon frock. It will tuck into the tiniest week-end case. It will fit into any occasion that arises. Along the shore in the evening, dancing on the pier, for dinner or tea, the printed chiffon is the loveliest offering of the season. I call mine "flowers of dawn." for it's a cloud of orchid and rose soms in softest rose, and a myriad of other garden tones. It came from Evelyn's, at 9 Winter Street, and cost $16.50. Oh, Anne, Evelyn has such beautiful Summer things—a host of these printed chiffons, some as low as $8.50, and even the full, graceful ones in size 40, but $16.50. New georgettes for travelling, navy blue and black — the charming Bubblette crepes and Fluffy-Duff radiums, which wash so well—at $13.75. A wealth of new all-over prints and cool short-sleeved darlings at $9.50. Pongees, rajahs, white crepes and crepe de chines and those irresistible, practical dinner gowns with sleeves to sew in when wanted,

If There Were a College of Charm

Its first course would be based on personal daintiness, or the fastidious daintiness of the person, which means the same thing. Because the clear skin, perfection of details, and a haunting fragrance make up the exquisite grooming which lingers long and pleasantly in one's memory.

A yet, after all, such a course is not necessary. One may wander along the toilet goods department of Filene's and learn the secrets of it within a few moments. First of all, there are the depilatory preparations—to remove superfluous hair. Bellin's Wonderstone is very good. It's like a rose colored pumice stone and when rotated lightly over the surface, leaves the skin smooth and clear. With no irritation or odor. That is $1.25. Then there is the popular 4711 depilatory powder, for 75c, which quickly and safely banishes unsightly hair and all trace of it.

"Dew" takes care of perspiration and body odors, and stops the perspiration as well. It is absolutely harmless and may be used at any time, as it becomes effective as soon as it has had a few moments to dry. This is but 50c.

Now for the bath which rests the nerves as well as cleanses and tones the skin. We'll go back to our favorite 4711 and choose Eau de Cologne Bath Salts (lilac, 50c, or $1.50), for that's a fragrance which never fails, nor clays with heavy sweetness. It softens and perfumes the water, making the bath a luxury, and leaves the skin like the velvet on the rose in early morning. Then 4711 Dusting Powder ($1.50) in the same Eau de Cologne. This is called the Aristocrat of the Bath Room and certainly adds that delightfully scented finishing touch. It comes in an attractive one-pound box, with a soft, fluffy velvet puff.

Holeproof Turns a Wicked Heel

On anyone who says it is not up to the last minute style. Not a wicked heel exactly, but a beautiful black heel, on the lovely Laleure stocking, or a wood brown heel on Vivante, the pale peach, and a deeper brown heel with Maxime. For Talbot's last shipment of Holeproof brought the latest combinations to the best of the summer colors for those who want the two-toned heels. In the extra long, fine gauge chiffons—sheer and flawless—silk from tip to with the light-like lisle in the service rein forcements, the most beautiful number, giving you the superb wearing quality of Holeproof, with the best features in smartness and the smart note in the ankle and foot. The price is $1.95.

But the $1.00 hosiery is the proof of the Holeproof pudding. Twenty-four inch silk stockings in the fairest Spring colors for One Dollar a pair, three pair for $2.85. Twenty-four inches of sheer gleaming silk, way over the knee, reinforced with lisle at the toe and feet—in the exquisite Parisian shades which Lucille herself created exclusively for Holeproof hosiery. In colors of the morning mist and twilight glow, of sunlight on the rose and the shadowed gleam of moonlight. Of sheer weblike chiffon, or the heavier service weight, all with that lustrous gleam of elegance and the strong endurance which has made us grateful for the honest workmanship of Holeproof. Yes, the girl with hosiery to buy and one dollar to go, makes no mistake at Talbot's, 395 Washington Street.

Here's a Dress

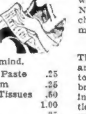
Which cost almost nothing. Allyn's Dress Shop, on the fifth floor of the Ambassador Building, 41 Winter Street, are having one of those grand, and splendiferous sales which clear the racks in a day and fill up your wardrobe for a year. Dresses for $8.95. Good dresses, better dresses, Best dresses. Allyn's don't carry any thing but high grade dresses. Some are early Spring models, the navy blue crepe de chines and the rich red georgettes. Some are early Summer—the pastel tones of green, tan and blue, the all over prints and the print and crepe combinations. And there is the fascinating midsummer favorites, with the short sleeves and graceful frills, which outlive every passing fad and fancy. All expensive dresses, most of them formerly $15.00, a few indeed were $25. And the sizes, by the way, run from 16 to 42.

Dr. Saul's Shoes

Go in next. Think of the joy of being able to walk miles without an ache or a pain. One visit to Dr. Allen P. Saul transforms the average woman from a member of the plazza chair brigade, who passively rock and talk, to those who use every moment of the Summer for active enjoyment. Golf, tennis, hiking — and ready to dance every night. He is now installed scientifically in room 312 of the New Studio Building, 119 Tremont Street. And thanks be to the impulse which called me to his door. Corns and callouses gone, muscles massaged into proper shape and function, a goodly supply of salves to keep the feet cool—to say nothing of these shoes. A pair of white shoes, black shoes and tan shoes. At $8.00 a pair. With the arch supports built in, first-to-measure, and the softest Summer leathers. And yet you wouldn't believe they were health shoes, for the lines are slender, the heel is average height and they certainly are the last word in style.

A Milk Diet

Is part of the Summer program for the skin—So Lactay has a place of honor in this suit case. Lactay is the magic lotion which "Puts your skin on a Milk Diet," and thus clears out congested poisons in the pores. It is a Barbara Bayle product, a liquid cold cream—white and fragrant — with the nourishing properties of milk and the curative elements of the finest vegetable oils — one of the latest acquisitions of modern beauty culture toward preserving the childhood freshness of the skin. It comes sealed in a diminutive milk bottle, most delightfully tempting and convenient to use. You simply pour it onto a bit of cotton, or onto the tips of your fingers, and rub lightly into the skin. You'll find that it rejuvenates the most sallow skin, leaving it glowing like a rose petal. It takes away the dark shadows under the eyes and tired lines about the mouth. And it's a splendid preventive of sunburn. Yes, Lactay goes where I go this Summer. And first I went to Meyer Jonasson's toilet goods department and bought it there for $1.00.



You'll want to clip this list out, Anne, and slip it into your own note book, because it's the quality of the powders, the soap and creams offered that make it unusually good.

There, I Knew It

You've fallen in love with that new Barivah fabric which I wrote you about last week. And I'm not a bit surprised. It surely is the most exquisite weave of silk and rayon, or silk and celanese, ever designed. It's absolutely exclusive. Sold only at The Duro Company, at 230 Bedford Street (just a step around the corner from Summer Street). And yet, in its different weights it's adaptable for innumerable uses. For women's and children's dresses, blouses, sport suits, negligees, men's shirts and pajamas, draperies and overhangings. The colors are fast, and will wash without losing their sheen and lustre. Even those delicate silky prints for children will tub like chambray. Your own exquisite pastel tones will be as lovely in October as they are today. And wasn't it a delightful surprise to discover how long the prices were—$1.35 a yard for the prints, $1.65 for the lighter weight, and $1.75 for the popular plain colors in the sport wear weight. Big Savings in the Coming Fabric!

Remove Your Head

From my suit case and let me see that permanent wave. Ummh! It's a beauty—as smooth as a fresh finger wave, with not a kink nor a krinkle between the crests and the valleys! It's as soft as a baby's hair, and the same fair gold. Tell me—am I right? You had it waved at Merlin's Beauty Salon, in the Dexter Building, 453 Washington Street. I knew it! Every ringlet shows that master touch—the genius of the right twist, the exact second for the steam which sets the wave without an atom of harm to the hair. Merlin's give the perfected permanent—the wave brought to its highest degree of delicate beauty, retaining the natural oil and original lustre. Merlin's are scalp and hair specialists, with the health of the hair as their first consideration. I'm so glad you went there rather than to take a chance on so important a thing as a permanent.

Suzanne Wright

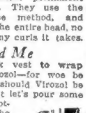
Is a friend I need—if a friend you need is a friend indeed. For just when one must have another hat, she announces a holiday sale, with dozens of her darling hats reduced to $5, $7.50 and $10.00. Those beautiful luscious straws have dropped at last from the topmost branches of the millinery trees, and we can crown our stumes with hats as Parisian as Paris, at the most moderate of moderate prices. From "bobbed hair" hats to matrons' hats, from skull cap hats to great sun shade hats—silk hats, ribbon hats, straw hats, felt hats, satin hats, horse hair hats, flower hats—even those lovely hats of hand painted georgette, and those of everglade straw are in the collection. And each one a delightful buy at any price. Suzanne Wright is in room 301 of the Lawrence Building, 142 Tremont St.

The Wave

You love to touch came from the shop you love to visit. Yes, those big, soft waves and ringlets you see on that fair head yonder were created in the French Beauty Shop (on the third floor of the New Studio Building, 110 Tremont Street), under the gifted touch of Mrs. Young and Billy. And, by the way, the season's getting on, and if any of your friends want a bob in the rush of the last minute vacationists, they would do well to make their appointment now. Tell 'em to call Congress 5166, and have time reserved. We're going to get weeks of hot weather, and straight, stringy hair isn't any more popular in hot weather than at any other time. Not with Mrs. Young and Billy to put in the safe, beautiful permanent wave of today. They use the Nestle Circuline method, and charge $15 for the entire head, no matter how many curls it takes.

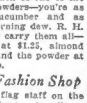
Hand Me

That glove silk vest to wrap around my Virozol—for woe be to the vacation should Virozol be broken. But first let's pour some into a smaller bottle to slip into the purse, for a moment along the way. Virozol Swedish Face Bath is an absolute necessity in the Summer, when the sun attacks the natural oil in the tissues, when perspiration oozes the pores and muscles droop in the heat. Cool, cleansing, stimulating and soothing. Like a quick cup of ginger ale, as invigorating as a plunge into the sea. And when the treatment is followed with a bit of Virozol Almond Cream, and finished with touch of one of the Virozol Face powders—you're as cool as the cucumber and as fresh as the morning dew. R. H. White Company carry them all—The Skin bath at $1.25, almond cream at $1.00 and the powder at $1.00 a box also.



Wetstone's Fashion Shop

Why scale the flag staff on the Metropolitan Theatre to sit on top of the world, when you can go right across the street to Wetstone's Fashion Shop, at 251 Tremont, and be at the tip top of fashion without hurting the depths of your purse? Evidently most of our friends have been taking the same thing, for last week, when this new, smart shop opened the doors in its formal opening, they all dropped in to look it over. They came, they saw, and they bought. They couldn't help it, for Wetstone's is "The Shop of Youth," radiant in those bewitching styles and fascinating modes which personify all that is young, and beautiful.



Faithfully yours,
Priscilla

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

"Colonial Country Fair" at Cohasset to Be Held Friday Next on the Hugh Bancroft Estate

FOR ORIGINALITY and variety Cohassett's "Colonial Country Fair" is out to make a record. Friday next is the day, and everyone in that smart and wonderfully attractive town is keen to make such a success as was never before achieved by a fair. Every brilliant mind (and the town is filled with such) is thinking up new attractions and stunts. The very peak of the fair is a cabaret. Borrowing a number from the Vincent Varieties (of pleasant memory) and adding "Bathing Beauties," monologues, specialties, pianologues, dances and accordion players, it is an all-star offering.

THE FAIR TAKES ITS MERRY way (to the benefit, financially, of St. Stephen's Church) at the Hugh Bancroft estate up on the hill of Sohier street, for although the Bancrofts are abroad their interest in St. Stephens—the Church of the Carillons—never wanes. Since the whole town is doing something for and at the fair space is lacking to recount each and every name. Selecting at random in the numbers, there are Mrs. Conover Fitch, Mrs. Arthur Blake, Miss Helen Rust, Miss Virginia Ayres, Mrs. William Gagnebin, Miss Muriel Crocker, Mrs. William R. Sears, Mrs. Clarence Hovey, Miss Dorothy Bolles and Mrs. Homer Bigelow.

BUT COHASSET'S PHILANthropic endeavors cease not with the Fair. There's a perfect furore of benefits for this and that, all delightfully contrived to please the eyes. On Wednesday the Unity Club Alliance of the First Parish takes the stage with its Rainbow luncheon and Summer sale. Luncheon, tea, pony rides, a exhibition of antiques in the old Parish House, all lend significance to the day. It's piece de resistance is a playlet "Outwitting the Weasel," at two in the afternoon on the tennis courts of the Charles Gammons place. Young fry of the town to the number of twenty-five are birds, and Miss Susette Shuebruk is a Butterfly.

COHASSET'S THIRD OFFERing in the near future is a Flower Show on July 7, 8 and 9 in the Town Hall, staged by the Garden Clubs. There are some lovely estates in and about Cohasset, and garden lovers by the score. So the show will be a thing of beauty and a joy to behold. That Mrs. Thomas Allen, back from a year of study in Rome, exhibits a garden figure in appropriate setting, is bound to be an extremely pleasing feature, and there are countless others.

VERY SOON NOW THE B. Nason Hamlins desert their attractive Dedham home with its lovely gardens for their equally attractive Cape Cod place, with its shore and dune and rolling hills of typically Cape Coddish. They call the place "Pirates' Point" and live there a Summertime existence of glorified leisure. It is at Dennis, a broad domain with a mansion house on its topmost point and before it the sparkling blue waters of Massachusetts Bay.

QUITE ECCLESIASTICALLY perfect a picture was the Cummings-Forbes ceremonial in Trinity Saturday. Lilies clustered at the altar, the clear chant of boyish voices (they had the vested choir), and a taper lighted aisle for the charming, smiling and perfectly poised bride. Brides attendants in gay pink frocks gave to bridal ensemble a rosy tinge. Mrs Charles K. Cummings, mother of the bride, was girlishly radiant in blue, and Mrs. J. Malcolm Forbes, the bridegroom's mother, was the distinguished matron in beige lace and chiffon.

NATALIE POTTER WINTHROP SARGENT

The grandchildren of the late Charles Sprague Sargent of Holm Lea attended a recent Harvard 1902 class reunion celebration at Holm Lea, at which Charles S. Sargent, Jr., was host.

IN THE PAINE CONNECTION, giving charm and beauty to the picture, there was Mrs. Robert Treat Paine in water white crepe and lace, a Frenchy creation of graceful lines. Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, 2d, was in black velvet chiffon with a suggestion of white. Mrs. John Bryant Paine's daughters (there are five, I believe,) was led by pink-cheeked Miss Helen, in white wrap and hat. Miss Helen Paine, her kinswoman, a highly distinguished older in the clan of Paine, was in gray.

A SALTY TANG PERVADES certain Smart Set celebrations over the holiday week-end. Down at water-girt Nahant the sportive youngest set is to have a morning water fete arranged by no less a master hand than that of James Otis. Summer at Nahant is moving in its accustomed rhythm, with the Nahant Club its central point. The weekly Friday evening dinner dance switches to Saturday, this week only, because of the Fourth, and has the Charles W. Graenoughs as hosts for one specially large party.

JOHN BLANCHARD, YOUNG son of the Archibald Blanchards of Boston and Nahant, was a dinner-dance host to a score of guests on Friday evening, when Nahant's Summer season really got under its frivolous way. Weekly, the Nahanters dine and dance, most informally, at the Nahant Club. It's a Summer colony that keeps its same identity year after year—of the Stevensons and the Curtises, the Blanchards, Mrs. Curtis Guild, the Wolcotts and the Kings, and those other household of the so-called "Old Settlers."

WITH TWO ATTRACTIVE young girls in the family, Summertime existence for the Walter M. Evatts at their Little's Point place is literally one house party after another. Nothing, if not hospitable are the Evatts, who always have a house full of young friends of Miss Emily or Miss Catherine Evatt, or the still younger Evatts. The family is together again for the season. Miss Catherine back from Mount Vernon, and the parents from a short European journey.

LADY BUILDS GLASS HOUSE; HER HORSE WEARS PANTS

Nyack, N. Y., June 27 (A.P.).—One mysterious Mrs. Word Leigh is building a glass house of a hillside near the colony of "Upon the Omnipotent" for absolute relaxation in the light giving rays of the sun, which is her religion. She never hides her rich auburn tresses from the sun, for her hats are open at the top.

But she makes her chestnut mare, Lady, wear trousers in the paddock as protection against flies.

COST HALF-MILLION TO PUT BAD MEN IN JAIL

Spokane, June 27 (A.P.).—It cost a million to put the De Autremont brothers behind the bars. Their pictures girdled the globe on more than 3,000,000 posters, and there were other expenses. The United States, the American Express and the Southern Pacific paid for the man hunt.

ROMANCE GOES ON RENO ROCKS

Los Angeles, June 27 (A.P.).—The Examiner says the romance of Forrest Stanley, matinee idol of several years ago, and Roberta Thaw, former Follies girl, which blossomed twelve years ago in a marriage that was the talk of stage circles, has withered and that Mrs. Stanley is on her way to Reno for a divorce.

Stanley has been connected with a stock company here several years and Miss Thaw came to Los Angeles from New York to join the same troupe. Both have appeared in motion pictures.

"Incompatibility," Mrs. Stanley said, "is the only cause of our separation.

"Our temperaments simply clashed.

MARTHA LEE GIVES TIMELY PICNIC TIPS

The Picnic Sandwich

THE backbone of every picnic basket is certainly the sandwich. Far be it from me to try to pry it from its pedestal of popularity, but don't you get tired of the same old fillings?

One of the nicest picnics ever was one I attended June 17, with the luncheon as the brightest spot in a brilliant day. One reason that it seemed a red letter picnic lunch may have been because I didn't put it up, but I think the chief reason was the tasty toothsomeness of the unusual sandwiches provided in abundance. I'm glad to say.

The first point in their favor was, of course, the bread. It was graham baker's bread, one day old. And it was sliced thin, daintily buttered, and, joy of joys, every suspicion of crust was neatly trimmed off.

In the dear dead days of my departed youth, I believed that dutifully eaten bread crusts would make my hair curl, but now, thanks to my permanent, I need not file my teeth before the onslaught on the picnic sandwich. I cast my wholehearted vote for the crustless kind, every time.

One of the fillings in these sandwiches was a new, richly prepared brand, with a cream cheese foundation that was especially delicious. With the cheese was mixed chopped pickles, pimentos and, to my best belief, olives. Whatever the combination, it certainly made a scrumptious sandwich.

Particularly popular were the butter rolls wrapped around a filling of cold sliced, boiled frankforts and crisp mixed bacon.

Sardines, boned and mixed with chopped hard boiled eggs and salad dressing made a tasty filling between thinly buttered slices of graham bread.

To serve with the sandwiches there was a generous supply of pale dry ginger ale and isn't it surprising how long these big bottles keep cool if they are thoroughly chilled before starting out on the day's celebration?

The chocolate marshmallow cake, cloverleaves and chocolate cookies, with creamy frosting filling added heavily to our calory count. That cake, by the way, was made from a recipe frequently used in the Martha Lee Kitchen. I'll be glad to send it to you if you'd like to have it. It's one of the two best sellers in a very famous tea room.

"Oh, Gee, Mama, this bread is honey!"

Little James Burns, son of Mrs. Minnie J. Burns of South Boston, does not care for his mother's bread, but of Bond Bread, to use his own expression, he says—"Oh Gee, mama, this bread is honey."

Just 8 years ago, 6405 Boston housewives brought samples of their home-baked bread to Tremont Temple to show us the kind of bread they wanted for themselves and their children. Being frankly copied from the best of these 6405 loaves, Bond Bread quickly became Boston's most popular bread.

Why is it that after 8 years of enforced popularity, Bond Bread now enjoys an even greater demand than ever before in its history?

Because day after day for 8 long years, Bond Bread has been uniformly home-like. Its splendid flavor comes from its pure ingredients—ingredients every bit as pure and choice as you yourself would use. Its healthfulness comes largely from its thorough baking. This thorough baking is what makes it so firm and close-textured, as well as so flavorful.

Every day more and more housewives realize it pays to discriminate in bread. They have tried them all and have convinced themselves that a home-like, healthful bread, like Bond, is the greatest bargain a woman can buy.

Baked Bean Day

BEING firm believers in the good old traditions of New England, we have appointed every Saturday noon as Baked Beans and Brown Bread Day in the Martha Lee Kitchen at 5 Winthrop Square. Real New England baked beans and delicious steaming brown bread will be served to all visitors in addition to whatever is being made at the regular 11 A. M. and 2 P. M. demonstrations.

To be absolutely honest, these beans and brown bread will come out of sealed containers, but we firmly believe that if we hadn't let you into the secret, you'd be positive that they were straight from a brown earthen bean pot and brown bread steamer.

We'll be more than glad to tell you the trade name so that you can solve your Saturday supper problem as easily as we have.

Chintz for Bird Cage

THE First Lady of the Land has launched the vogue for chintz bird cage covers. Mrs. Coolidge's five pet canary birds are protected from drafts every night with colorful chintz bags made to pull up over the cage and tie with a ribbon on top. This gives excellent protection to these delicate songsters and it's interesting to watch this attractive, sensible fashion spreading through the country.

Deviled Eggs for Basket Lunches

Four hard-cooked eggs, 4 tablespoons grated cream cheese, 2 tablespoons of minced sweet pepper, 2 tablespoons melted butter, salt and Cayenne.

Slice the eggs into halves lengthwise and carefully remove the yolks. Work into a paste with the butter, minced peppers and the cheese. Season with salt and a bit of Cayenne. Fill into the egg cavities, and serve in a bed of lettuce.

Killing the Insects

SWIFTLY, surely, a certain insecticide kills every fly, mosquito, ant, and — unspeakable thought—roach, in any home. It never misses one.

When you set out to conduct a wholesale slaughter of these pests, why not kill them all? This product used in a room buzzing with flies or mosquitoes gets every one of these pests. It is the deadliest insect killer made and no bug ever lives through it or recovers from it. It's the demon destroyer of flies, mosquitoes, moths, everything in fact that creeps or crawls, but it is absolutely harmless to humans and animals.

You see it contains a secret vegetable ingredient which insects breathe and die. In two forms liquid or powder, both equally deadly, at 15c. I believe it's the lowest priced insect killer on the market.

Tips From Market

NATIVE strawberries are, of course, the center of attraction at the fruit counters and the roadside stands. Cataloups are good and plentiful.

The potato market came down as fast as it went up. Cabbage is still fairly high, but spinach and other greens are cheap.

Something quite new on the market is the native grown iceberg lettuce. By cutting up the coarser outside leaves and marinating them in oil and vinegar they can be used as a "filler" in salads.

Most beef steaks and lamb are high priced—I found some iddney lamb chops as high as 90 cents a pound. Poultry prices are low so this is a good time to indulge in a mid-week feast of fricasseed fowl.

ADD A FEW DROPS OF LEMON JUICE when running dates, figs or raisins through the food chopper. It will greatly help in preventing the fruit from clogging the chopper.

Rice Food of Many

RICE, which for centuries has been the staple food for half the human race, constantly is growing more popular in this country.

Starch is the queen of carbohydrates, and no starch food is more wholesome or palatable than rice.

Puffed Rice, which is shot from guns, is one of the wonders of the age. The choicest grains are sealed in gigantic gun barrels into which live steam is loosed at terrific pressure. After nearly one hour of this intense moist heat, during which time every particle of moisture in the grain has generated steam, these great guns are fired. As the super-steamed grains come in contact with the normal air, they literally explode and are puffed to eight times their original size.

In each grain more than 200,000 separate explosions of starch granules have taken place, so they digest as easily as a snowflake melts in the palm of the hand.

Floated in bowls of milk or half and half—with sugar and cream or with fresh or cooked fruits, puffed rice is the daintiest of highly nourishing year-round foods.

'Mallow Gingerbread With Whipped Cream

For Marshmallow Gingerbread with Whipped Cream, take one-half cup shortening, one-half cup sugar, two eggs, one-half teaspoon molasses, one cup sour cream, two cups flour, one and one-half teaspoon soda, teaspoon ginger, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon salt, marshmallows.

Cream shortening and sugar together. Add beaten eggs and molasses and mix well. Mix and sift flour, soda, ginger, cinnamon and salt and add alternately with milk to egg mixture.

Pour into greased shallow pan and bake in hot oven (350 degrees F.) twenty-five minutes. Remove from pan and split in two layers, using two forks. Put marshmallows between and put back in oven just long enough to melt marshmallows (three to five minutes). Serve hot with sweetened whipped cream.

Wednesday at Kitchen

EVERY day is an interesting day in the Martha Lee Kitchen, but next Wednesday afternoon is going to be particularly interesting. Because we'll be making and serving a batch of those now famous little baking powder biscuits built right around the midget frankforts.

They're a pretty good thought for the holiday picnic basket. We'll also broil the larger variety in their bacon blankets and show you what good sandwiches they make, too.

Then there'll be another sandwich of chopped frankforts, chopped eggs and salad dressing. And fruit punch and cookies for good measure. Wednesday afternoon at 2 p. m.

Rule for Two Loaves of Fine Spice Cake

Fine Spice Cake—Take one-half cup butter, one cup brown sugar, one-half cup molasses, yolks of four eggs, one cup sour milk, two and one-half cups flour, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon cloves, one-quarter nutmeg grated, one cup raisins, seeded and cut in pieces, one-half cup currents, one-half cup English walnut meats cut in pieces, one and one-half tea spoon baking powder.

Mix ingredients in the order given. This recipe makes two loaves.

Butter Buns Are Fine

EVERY morn a certain gentleman brings to the Martha Lee Kitchen not violets, but bread—and such bread! White bread of finest texture and crispy brown crust, graham bread of just the right moist deliciousness, handsome brown loaves of Vienna bread, pans of biscuits that truly put mother's baking to shame, and once or twice a week he leaves a supply of the best-ever butter biscuits.

Heated for a breakfast or luncheon bun, steamed and served with hot frankforts or used for sandwiches, these butter rolls strike an appreciative chord in any tummy.

I think they are due to appear again in the kitchen about next Friday, so if you are planning your weekly visit to the kitchen to fall on that day, don't forget to remind us that you want to try them. Or any of the other varieties.

We are mighty proud of the entire assortment, knowing the immaculate conditions under which they are produced and the high quality of the ingredients of which they are made.

ORGANDY SHOULD BE WASHED IN ICE-WATER, which will leave it stiff and new looking. Do not dry or starch it will roll it after washing and iron while it is wet.

FOR SORE FEET: When you are footsore from being for hours on your feet you can enjoy wonderful and instant relief by taking a foot bath of warm water and soda—use half a pound of baking soda to a moderate amount of water.

LADIES battling batter. Dainty digits deep in dough.

Such was the mid-afternoon captivity of our mothers and grandmothers. The cake must be made for supper's dessert.

But now—

There are so many fine-tasting Sunshine Biscuits to take the place of cake. Chief among them is Sunshine Hydrox—in which a rare, velvety cream unites two glorious chocolate biscuits to tempt your appetite.

Probably the most delicious thing to eat that ever crossed your table. It has to be to supplant the cake that mother made.

The Prudent Prune

GONE are the days when the unappreciated prune was seldom found save on the menus of thrifty boarding house keepers. Today we realize that prunes are one of nature's invaluable gifts to us, rich as they are in mineral salts, fruit sugars, roughage of skin and fiber and appetizing flavor.

Here are three recipes that show new and interesting uses for this friendly fruit.

PRUNE LEMON PIE—Two cups cooked, pitted prunes, one-half cup sugar, 2 tbsps. flour, ½ tsp. cinnamon, 1 tbsp. lemon juice, 1 tsp. lemon rind, one-half tsp. salt, 1 tbsp. butter, ½ cup prune juice.

Mix together sugar, flour, cinnamon, salt, lemon rind, lemon juice and add to prunes. Place in a deep-dish pie pan and add butter in pieces over the top. Wet edges of crust with cold water, add top crust, with cuts to allow escape of steam, and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) until the edges begin to brown, then reduce temperature to 300 degrees F. and bake 40 minutes.

FRUIT BARS—One cup brown sugar, one-third cup shortening, 2 eggs, one-half cup buttermilk, one-half tsp. soda, one-half tsp. salt, 2 tsps. baking powder, 1¼ cups flour, 1 pound prunes.

Remove seeds from prunes and put through food chopper, using coarse cutter. Cream sugar and shortening, add well-beaten eggs and buttermilk. Sift remaining dry ingredients and sprinkle a portion of this over the chopped prunes. Mix altogether and beat thoroughly. Pour into a shallow tin and bake 15 minutes in a moderate oven (325 to 350 degrees F.). When cool, cut in bars and roll in powder.

BISCUITS—Two cups flour, 4 tsps. baking powder, one-half tsp. salt, 2 tbsps. sugar, 4 tbsps. shortening, three-quarter cup milk.

Sift flour with baking powder, sugar and salt. Cut in shortening, and add sufficient milk to make a soft dough. Pat out one-quarter inch thick. Cut with a cutter about 2 inches in diameter. Place half of rounds on a greased baking pan, spread with softened butter and place the remaining halves on top. Bake in a hot oven (400 to 450 degrees F.) for 10 to 12 minutes. Separate halves of cake, add more butter if desired, and place a spoonful of prune mixture between and on top. Serve plain or with whipped cream.

New Mop Is Handy

HERE'S a challenge to the whole world. Show me the woman who enjoys mopping her floors, and I will guarantee you'll find she uses a self-wringing mop.

You can't convince me that there is a woman in the world who does not abhor the very thought of wringing a sopping dirty mop cloth with her own hands. Ugh! how I used to fairly shut my eyes before putting my hands into the grimy water.

Soap and water and much scrubbing eventually got the grit and grime out of my digits, but it never restored their normal texture.

Mopping is certainly ruinous to hands and nails—or rather it always has been until now, when you can get the finest mop in seven states—in the whole U. S. A., if you ask me—a darling mop that you wring simply by turning the handle. No stooping over, no strained wrists, and you never touch your hands to the mop water.

This new mop glides into corners, under the stove and table and close along the baseboard with no splashes or streaks to wipe off afterwards. With a cloth of soft cotton strands in it when put in a clean state, this self-wringing mop will do a better job and do it faster.

You can use better waxe, too, since your hands never touch it. Light as a broom, yet sturdily built without a spring or gear, all-metal parts, rust-proof, it will last unusually long. And you can replace the cloth with the regular filler of one you make.

If you know the comfort that this mop would be, I know you couldn't wait to get one for yourself. Truly, I wouldn't part with mine for its weight in gold if I couldn't get an other.

Next time you're in the Martha Lee Kitchen don't fail to ask to see this wonderful mop that wrings itself—that keeps your hands clean and dry and safe, and that complete, with cloth, costs only $1.

Canned Meat Recipes

HERE are some recipes using convenient canned meats and fish that I hope will prove helpful and economical dinner dishes this warm weather.

Shredded Ham with Currant Jelly Sauce: Place one-half tablespoon of butter and one-third cup of currant jelly in double boiler. As soon as it is melted add a few grains of cayenne, one-fourth cup sherry jail, and one cup of cold ham loaf which has been shredded. Simmer for five minutes.

Chicken Meat Cakes: Mix one cup of chopped boneless chicken, one tablespoonful of cream, one egg slightly beaten, one-fourth teaspoon of salt and a few grains of pepper. Shape in small flat cakes, dip in egg and crumbs and saute in butter until well browned on both sides. Remove to a hot platter and pour around one cup of white sauce to which has been added, just before serving, one-third cup of celery cut in small pieces.

Kippered Herring: Remove the fish from the can and arrange on a platter that may be put in the oven, sprinkle with pepper, brush over with lemon juice and melted butter and pour over the liquor left in the can. Heat thoroughly and garnish with parsley and slices of lemon.

Crab and Tomato Salad: To one cup of canned crab meat, add two-thirds cup celery, cut in small pieces, and six small tomatoes peeled, chilled and cut in quarters. Moisten with mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce leaves and garnish with mayonnaise, curled celery and small pieces of tomato.

Making Pineapple Upside Down Cake

Pineapple Upside Down Cake is made this way: Into an oblong cake pan put one-quarter cup light brown sugar and one-quarter cup butter. Place in oven until butter is melted, then add one cup drained crushed pineapple, one cup chopped nut meats. Cover with this cake mixture: One cup sugar, one-quarter cup butter, one and one-half cups pastry flour, two eggs beaten separately, one cup pineapple syrup two teaspoons baking powder, one half teaspoon salt, bake forty-five minutes at 350 degrees F. Serve upside down with whipped cream.

How to Cook a Husband

A GOOD many husbands are entirely spoiled by mismanagement in cooking, and so are not tender and good. Some women keep them too constantly in hot water; others freeze them; others put them in a stew; others roast them; others keep them constantly in a pickle.

It cannot be supposed that any husband will be good and tender if managed in this way, but they are truly delicious if properly treated. Don't keep him in the kettle by force, as he will stay there himself if proper care is taken; if he should sputter and fizz, don't be anxious—some husbands do this. Add a little sugar in the variety of what confectioners call "kisses," but on no account add any vinegar or pepper; a little spice improves him, but must be used with judgment.

Do not try him with something sharp to see if he is becoming tender. Stir him gently the while, lest he lie too long in the kettle and become flat and tasteless. Above all, don't let him get hard boiled.

If you follow these directions you will find him very digestible, agreeing nicely with you, and he will keep as long as you want to keep him.

Save Sewing on Buttons—If, when washing children's little waists or when washing other garments on which there are buttons, the garments are turned so the buttons are inside and protected when putting them through the wringer, they will not be torn off.

"My husband called it the best meal I ever cooked!"

"ONE day I heard of putting Gulden's in my cooking. I tried it in beef loaf, and mixed it in before I served my spinach. The results were delicious—something new in flavoring. My husband said it was the best dinner I'd ever cooked."

Thousands of housewives now use this new, simple way of seasoning. Just a few golden drops of Gulden's spread over meats before they are roasted or broiled—mixed in when you cook vegetables—and you will be astonished at the rich, delicious flavor your foods will have.

Only in Gulden's do you get the perfect blending of the world's finest mustard seeds with rare, mellow spices. This is why it's the one complete seasoner for cooking.

TWO BURNED IN REVERE BLAST FROM GAS

Frank Butters, 55, and Joseph Green, 22, employes of the Suburban Gas & Electric Company, were burned about the face and arms today when a spark from a wrench they were using on a gas pipe in the basement of the house at No. 32 Tuscano avenue, Revere, caused a slight explosion and set fire to the structure.

Both men, their clothing ablaze, rushed out to the street. Bystanders went to their aid. Someone notified the fire department and two alarms brought apparatus. The fire damage was less than $100.

Butters and Green were attended by a physician and taken to their homes. No one was in the house when the fire started.

Wales Kisses Duchess as Yorks' Tour to South Sea Ends

Portsmouth, Eng., June 27.—The giant battle cruiser Renown, ablaze with bunting, docked at the Admiralty jetty here today, bringing to an end the six months' tour of the Duke and Duchess of York, during which they toured Panama, New Zealand, Mauritius, Malta, Gibralta and other Empire points.

The Prince of Wales greeted the Duchess with a kiss, and the brothers shook hands warmly.

"How is Betty?" was the first question the Duchess asked, referring to little Princess Elizabeth.

"She's wonderful," the Prince answered.

EAST BOSTON AIRPORT NEEDS ATTENTION

Commerce will develop a port at Camp Hardiest and another [illegible] development is taking shape in Springfield.

Before long, they will all have airports, cities of the second class and cities of the third, fourth and lower classes; the big towns, the inland villages, every community which aims to remain in the ranks of the up and coming.

But that is not the sort of competition which Boston must meet and meet at once.

The Port Commission of the city of Portland, Oregon, proceeding on the assumption that a port is a port—whether for sea travel or air travel—and that it is as much the duty of the Port authority to provide facilities for aircraft to land as it is to provide dockage for sea craft, is constructing an airport which will call for the expenditure of approximately $1,250,000.

Twice within the past month the feasibility of crossing the Atlantic by airplane has been demonstrated by American flyers. It may be that before these lines are in type a third demonstration will be under way.

NEW PASSENGER LINES.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh is making plans for the establishment at an early date of a passenger carrying air transport line which will be "national in its scope."

In New York an order has just been placed for five de luxe passenger planes to be placed in services between New York and Chicago and New York and Miami. The Chicago flight will be made in 7½, the Miami run in 10 hours.

Remember how the motor car came upon us—and got away from us?

Discussing the parking problem, at a Grange meeting in Haverhill a night or two ago, Alderman Parkman B. Flanders recalled that in 1903 the late Postmaster Horace L. Pinkham owned the only automobile in the city.

Twenty-three years from now, some middle-aged member of the Boston City Council will recall the time, "back in 1927," when there was but one airplane line to New York out of Boston, and soon to any other city. "Imagine!" the young people will say.

LOGICAL TERMINAL.

Nearest to Europe of America's large cities, Boston is the logical terminal for trans-Atlantic air lines. Experts have called our landing field the "most advantageously located" on the Atlantic coast. Here should be the leading centre of the aircraft industry in the United States.

In this day of sharp competition between and among cities, however, being the logical terminal for trans-Atlantic air lines will not get us any where in particular, nor will that "most advantageous location." If Boston's airport gets the business it will be because Boston's airport is indisputably the best in every essential and among the pressing immediate needs of the Boston airport are:

1—A landing field of the present size, enabling three-engine tickers to alight and get away.
2—More hangars.
3—Radio service.
4—Lighting equipment for night flying.
5—Meteorological intelligence.
6—Proper terminal facilities in general.

BETTER TERMINAL NEEDED.

Nearer the heart of the business section than is the case in any other large city in the United States, the airport has been slow to stir popular interest and community enthusiasm because, nevertheless, it is believed to be "hard to get to."

As a matter of fact, the Elevated lines, with a transfer or two entour will bring one within a 10-minute walk of the port. Take the tunnel to Maverick square, change to a Jeffrey's Point surface car, and without walk the rest of the distance consider whether your city should give the airport something better than this cobblestone approach and do it now.

The great need of the air service at this time, here and quite generally everywhere, is better terminal facilities. What Boston must have is not merely a "potentially" great airport but one comparable in every important respect to those at Croydon and Le Bourget.

Lindbergh says, and Lindbergh ought to know, that transatlantic commerce will come to pass within ten years. Other authorities look for the accomplishment in a shorter time, but call it ten years.

It is bound to come and Boston should be prepared for it. On this coast was the first permanent settlement of white people in what is now the United States of America. Here is the natural terminal of transatlantic service.

AIRPORT'S NEEDS IMPORTANT.

Making the Boston airport what it should be will demand no vast expenditure from the public funds and add to no one's tax bill. We are not called upon for anything so prodigious as Portland, Oregon's, $1,250,000 development. We HAVE the airport. It IS functioning. Its needs are comparatively few, but they ARE important.

Sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, the landing field in East Boston was constructed with the money of State and city appropriations and private subscriptions collected by the chamber. The field has been leased to the Federal government for operation and control, but it is open to commercial and other civilian pilots under the same regulations as those which apply to military and air mail pilots.

This is a good time, perhaps the best of times, to take up the question of the airport and talk it over "in family."

Why? Because, for one reason, the city is celebrating air mail week, the big doings opening at noon today at Parkman Bandstand on Boston Common. Look up, and you may see part of the show.

BIG AIR FLEET COMING.

At what is admittedly a difficult season for luncheons, 535 members of the Chamber of Commerce have made reservations for an assembly in the main dining room at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow, when Lieutenant-Colonel H. H. Rice, Aeronautics branch, United States Department of Commerce, will deliver an illustrated talk on "Commercial Aviation."

On Wednesday, 36 flying contestants in the national air tour sponsored by Edsel B. Ford, will come to town, the third day of a 3100-mile competition. See them at the airport—and learn, incidentally, why America is soaring to first place as aviation country. The "U" will provide special buses to the airport from Maverick square.

On Thursday, the 20 flyers will hop off for New York at 10 a. m.

Friday will be the first anniversary of the air mail in Boston. Hughey Wells, who brought it in, will fly a 3-motored ship out of Boston. The rate is only 10 cents a half ounce to any point in the country, mail at the General Post Office up to 8:15 p. m.

NEW AIRPORT READY.

On Saturday, the Dennison Airport at Squantum will be dedicated, a private enterprise, with the FIRST AIRPORT IN MASSACHUSETTS LIGHTED FOR NIGHT FLYING.

Governor Fuller has just named four members of an Aviation Commission, which will consider among other things, "how to extend and improve the aircraft landing field in East Boston."

The Boston Evening American places that question before its readers in this form, "What can the citizens do to make Boston Airport the best in the country?"

The discussion will begin in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

Story of Love and Intrigue; A Girl Who Kept Her Head and a Tiger Woman

Lady Meldreth is fascinated by Eddie Wisden, a romantic figure in Pinaud's tea dance resort. Eddie has high hopes of marrying the great lady, and thereby solving his social and financial problems, as soon as she divorces her sporting husband, Lord Meldreth. The money situation in the Wisden home, which is ruled by a grasping mother, becomes exceedingly stringent, especially after Jill, Eddie's popular half-sister, loses her place with a road show. Jill is an idealist and her high standards make her brother rather ashamed of his own scheming conduct. Jill, exiles from London, is in grave financial difficulties. Far out on a country road she is overcome by a terrific storm, and seeks refuge in a shack where she faints from fatigue, and is later discovered by Lord Meldreth, whose shooting camp happens to be nearby.

Jill, revived, jokes with her rescuer and Lord Meldreth envisions a pleasant day with the lovely young actress.

Stirred by Jill's youth and beauty, Meldreth embraces and kisses her, just as his servant, Parton, returns and enters the room.

Jill repulses Meldreth, puts him in his place, but forgives his offensive actions, when he apologizes.

Driving her to the tram, Meldreth tells Jill she is the only girl in the world for him. They part, a little sorrowfully.

The Pilgrim's Progress — By John Bunyan

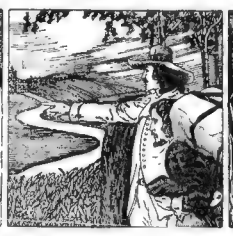
Christian, a citizen of the City of Destruction, was in great distress. He was weighted down with a heavy burden, the conviction of sin, and no one could free him from it. He read in a Book that his City and all its inhabitants would be destroyed, and in his sorrow he cried aloud, "What shall I do?"



Then Evangelist came to him and told him that if he would be freed from his burden he must become a pilgrim to the Celestial City. The entrance to the path was through a Wicket Gate. Christian tried to persuade his wife and family to join him, but they refused, and he set out alone.

Love for Fighting Key to Sharkey's Rise

By Jack Conway

"JACK SHARKEY'S rise to a position in the fistic sun has been more rapid than that of any heavyweight in the history of the ring," declared Mr. Boston today. "I'm kind of tickled the way Sharkey has come through," resumed the veteran, "as I was the original Sharkey booster. We all like to see our selections come down the home stretch in the lead. Of course, we want the better man to win, but way down deep in our hearts we hope that the better man will be the bird whom we have tipped to outgallop the field.

Mr. Boston

"Back three years ago when Sharkey, fresh from the preliminary ranks, was fighting birds like Eddie Record and Floyd Johnson I chirped that within a few years he would be bouncing his punches off Jack Dempsey's chin. The wise boys gave me the laugh at the time, but they must now fall in line.

"Some of the gang didn't agree with my dope when I told them that Sharkey would crack Maloney wide open, stop Wills if the latter was obliged to fight within the rules of the game and for he permitted to count it primitive murder as was the case in the Risko bout, smack Renaud Lee and Al Ettore Mi Figlio, but I guess they'll all tip the old hat right now and admit that Sharkey is a pretty fair type of fighting man.

"PLENTY of people have asked me the reason why Sharkey has been so successful in the ring. The answer is a pipe. He LIKES TO FIGHT. He is also proud of his business. He doesn't want to be a moving picture sheik or a big business man. Fighting is his game and he intends to stick to it.

"Last week in New York, Billy Gibson guaranteed $25 to a Tunney boy in September if he would pass up the Dempsey match. Gibson wanted to protect Tunney against a possible injury to the winner of the Blakeville mixer in Jan.

"I can't wait until September for a fight," Sharkey answered. "I haven't been in a ring since I stopped Maloney last month. I'm ready to fight Dempsey right now."

"It's a natural love for a two fisted scrap to look like Jack has a degree of intelligence and real boxing class. Mensah Sharkey is for a lot of most posers. He plans his bouts and then fights according to plan. If Jack wants to take you into confidence right now, he could tell you every move he will make when he faces Tiger Jack.

"Sharkey saw Dempsey battle Tunney last Fall. As he watched that contest he studied every move made by Dempsey. More important, remember what Dempsey did. You won't find Dempsey pulling any unexpected stuff on Sharkey.

"Unlike Dempsey and some other fighters, Sharkey likes to see his future opponents in action if possible.

"If I can see a fellow box, I can dope out a way to beat him," says Jack.

"EVER since he started boxing, Sharkey has been looking forward to the day he would get a crack at Dempsey. The two Jacks met last summer at the office of the New York Boxing Commission. Dempsey was trying to secure a license for a Tunney bout, Sharkey was attempting to make Gene go through with a contract to fight him.

"I'd like you to act as a sparring partner while I'm getting ready for Tunney," said Dempsey. 'You know it would improve your ability if you worked with me.'

"I won't be a sparring partner to anybody," replied Sharkey. 'I hope to meet you in the ring some day, Jack. You can then teach me something IF YOU CAN.'

"Jimmy Buckley later attempted to place Sharkey in one of the preliminaries on the Dempsey-Tunney bout to show him before the 150,000 crowd in Philadelphia. He wired Rickard agreeing to permit Sharkey to box FREE OF CHARGE. Rickey didn't even get a number from Sharkey.

"Next month Rickard will pay Sharkey close to $250 00 to get him into the ring with Dempsey. A great racket of ups and downs as this boxing game."

Golf Notes

Never did a Massachusetts open champion find himself up against such a tough assignment as faces Donald Vinton of the Plymouth Country Club at Sandy Burr this week. The popular South Shore pro is pitted against some of the greatest golfers in the East. So fast is the field that scarcely anyone is giving Don even an outside chance, but one thing is a certainty and that is that Vinton will go down fighting.

There are at least a half dozen young golfers who carried a vast amount of experience from the Oakley four ball tournament last week. Such boys as Gerard Moore, Billy Tomasello, Harvey Teaksbury, Joe Lamb, Wallace Coolidge and Steve Hopkins made their debuts at that company and they all gave wonderful accounts of their ability as golfers.

Wallace Coolidge, of Arlmont, a protege of George Aulbach and Joe Monahan, set up a record which gives promise of lasting for many seasons. On each round of match play, Coolidge came through with "birdie" 3s on the 18th hole. After he dropped his fourth "birdie" in the finals of Jack Tewksbury and Marcy, Wally admitted that the home hole at Oakley was the finest he ever played.

Close to 200 golfers are expected to gather at the Oasley Country Club tomorrow for the annual Boston Four Ball League field day. All golfers who have played one match or either a first or second team this spring is eligible for field day competition and few will pass up this outing, which is always the banner one of the season.

Although practically all the leading golfers of New Hampshire played at the State would be championship last Saturday at the Lochmere Country Club, 36 players entered in competition on May 31 and 1 and 2 and 3 and 4 and 5 and 6 and 7 and 8 and 9 and 10 and 11 and 12 and 13 and 14 and 15 and 16 and 17 and 18 and 19 and 20 and 21 and 22 and 23 and 24 and 25 and 26 and 27 and 28 and 29 and 30 and What's a Cop Without a Uniform? Listen to This!

New Bedford, Mass., June 27. (A.P.)—The New Bedford police baseball team will withdraw from the West End Twilight League this week "for the good of the department," Captain John T. McKay announced tonight.

Charging spectators with being unusually hostile to the blue coat players and persistently abusive in their comment, Captain McKay said the "razzing" his men were subjected to did not tend to increase the morale of the department or the respect of the public for the policemen.

The police team is in second place.

JACK DEMPSEY

Can Jack Dempsey Come Back? $100 for Best Answers

JACK SHARKEY

JACK DEMPSEY, former world champion heavyweight, stages his big effort to come back and regain the crown against Boston's Jack Sharkey in New York on July 21. Jack, once one of the greatest and hardest hitting battlers the ring had known, was licked by Gene Tunney last year. The Tiger that was looked like a burned-out old man in that scrap. His fire and punch were missing.

Jack felt that he was not in his best shape for that row. He has been training in the California mountains for two months. He says his old vim is back, that he will beat Sharkey. Boston fans know that the Brighton youth looked every bit a champion when he knocked out Jimmy Maloney last month.

Can Dempsey come back, to defeat the splendid fighting machine, Sharkey? The Boston Evening American would like to hear from the fans about this. Send in your opinion. A prize of $50 will be awarded for the best letter. A $25 check will go to the second best, and awards of $5 each will be made for the next five letters that seem to answer the question best, in the opinion of the sporting editor. This contest will close Saturday, July 9. Address letters to Dempsey Editor, Boston Evening American, Winthrop Square. Make 'em snappy.

Recent tests have demonstrated that the possibility of error is not greater than one-twentieth of a second.

The old-time tradition against Sunday practice here for the crews was kept more or less in practice is not in spirit also, stormy weather greeted the oarsmen who ventured on the river and caused the cancellation of serious work. Only the Columbia, Cornell, and California shells were on the water.

After the abbreviated practice out the Columbia squad did some strenuous shore duty, smearing their legs nicely with a beak like through the surrounding hills. Gordon Pierce the number 4 man of the Morningside eights, who is nursing a weak ankle, was the only man missing.

The oarsmen in the other camps spent a quiet day.

World's Heavyweight Champion

THE first fight I ever saw remains vivid as perhaps the most thrilling; the first battle I ever looked at between heavyweights was the most terrible thing, so far as action was concerned.

Each cost me $1

And each happened somewhere back in 1913.

I was along about 14 or so when I became all excited—as did the rest of New York—over the prospective battle between Leach Cross and Willie Ritchie, who then was lightweight champion of the world.

When we got [illegible] boys into action, I was parked up near the rafters of old Madison Square Garden, as a cost of $1. But I saw a fight that was worth about 100 times the price.

Rose Blossoms Aid Charm and Loveliness

By Maria Jeritza,

"LET us crown ourselves with rose-buds before they be withered," wrote a wise man of ancient days.

The wise woman in quest of beauty makes the most of June's wonder gift of roses, and enjoys to the utmost their fragrance and bloom.

Even though a bouquet of roses renewed every few days may seem an extravagance to the city dweller of limited pocketbook, yet in June when roses are so plentiful and cost so little, surely every woman can afford to keep one rose blooming on its graceful stem in a slender vase. And that one rose will possess the mystery and grace of all beauty.

These blossoms will doubly serve your charm and loveliness. For a rose city can do almost miracles and lend you with their fresh bloom—one can scatter the faded petals on a piece of bread, or and let them dry in a dark, dry closet for three days. At the end of that time place them in a mortar in a mortar. Sprinkle over the thoroughly dried leaves a layer consisting of equal parts of powdered mace, ground allspice and ground cloves, to which may be added a bit of dried nutmeg, a bit of cinnamon and broken up bits and pieces of sandalwood.

Now place another layer of the rose leaves on these spices, a layer of spices next and so on. If you have not enough rose leaves add dried lavender flowers or violets with the rose leaves. And you may like to add now and then a drop of your favorite perfume.

Keep the jar covered except when you wish to fragrance the air. Then uncover it or pour out some of the potpourri into a silver bowl on a tray of your boudoir or living room. Anyone who has a jar of rose petals or a rose jar, or can get its all the petals of all the roses from all your bouquets and in this way constantly renew your own rose potpourri.

If you wish to diffuse its fragrance throughout your linen and lingerie, lay among them small bags made of chiffon filled with potpourri, renewing the potpourri every few days.

Certainly, women are banner because of the restful, delightful tonic to their complexion beauty contained by the "rose fortified." When you are very tired, before lying down for five or ten minutes to rest, spray your face with warm rose water by means of a perfume atomizer, then gently sponge it off with absorbent cotton.

Rose water is cleansing, has antiseptic properties and tones and softens the skin helping to erase nerve lines and wrinkles.

Attar of roses is one of the most distinctive — and expensive — perfumes made.

You will find the following mixture, called "Virgin milk," softening and bleaching. Possibly, it may bleach your freckles if you smear it over your face several times daily:

Rosewater, one ounce; benzoin, four drops.

Shake this lotion before using it. If your skin is very dry, you may like better a mixture of one ounce of glycerin, two ounces of rosewater and five drops of benzoin for your face and hands.

CHANDLER IS MISSING—The day after Chandler's fight with Palmer in the latter's apartment Corinne, still unnerved by the mellow's attempted attack on her, tried ineffectually to locate her heroic young guardian. Broadway traffic [illegible] a little bit. Let's do a bit of sightseeing."

THE MYSTERIOUS TIPSTER—Fluffy returned late that afternoon with a serious expression. "Something's doing, that's sure," she announced. "I got the tip-off from a friend of mine downtown that Palmer is out after Chandler, strong. It looks to me like a cold army game." Corinne appeared puzzled. "What do you mean by that?" she asked. "Never mind," Fluffy returned quickly. "Let's wait for further developments." They came sooner than either of them thought. Corinne had just finished dressing for the street when the telephone bell rang shrilly.

CLOUDS OF WAR—"Miss Lowell?" a feminine voice inquired. Corinne replied in the affirmative. "May I see you a moment at your apartment. It's very important," the voice insisted. "Who—why, yes," replied Corinne, "what is it?" "Something that concerns you vitally. I can't talk over the telephone. Goodbye." Corinne removed her coat and cloak, puzzled in a few words she recognized by the mysterious conversation. "The Lords are being crown tighter—the walls are closing in," was her roommate's cryptic remark.

THE STARTLING REVELATION—Corinne opened the apartment door to admit a tall, exquisitely dressed, handsome girl whose eyes were suspiciously red—possibly from weeping, Corinne thought. "I am Miss Gay," announced the strange woman. "You are Miss Lowell." Corinne nodded. "You are the ward of Clifford Chandler," she persisted. Corinne drew back startled. "Why—why, yes," she answered. "Why do you ask?" The other woman grew agitated. "We must lose no time, then," she said. "They are trying to blackmail him!"

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My sister-in-law is about to move into a beautiful new home. I cannot afford to give her much, but would like to send her a present, so I am writing to ask you what would be appropriate. She is my husband's sister and I would like to say just the right thing.

A READER.

THIS is the kind of letter that I especially love to have, for it shows such a nice social sense. So many people seem to give gifts in a case like this, because they feel they can afford to give a gift. But they cannot afford to send a present, expressing the fact that you wish them happiness.

Your letter might say something like this:

Dearest Mary and John:

I am so glad that my dear people [illegible] a new home and my good wishes go with it. We are so glad that you decided on the new one and are now so situated. I [illegible] like to send you precious gifts for the new house—a beautiful lamp to grow in your rooms or a lovely piece of silver to tell you of our devotion every time you use it, or some wondrous picture—but at present we can send you only our deep and real affection for you both and our deep and real wishes that with you always in your new home will be the glorious happiness that you both so richly have and deserve.

Dearest love from us both to you both—and to Number 423 East avenue.

Most affectionately yours,

ANNE.

Shackled Souls

Author of "Chickie"

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

CHAPTER 41.

ONE morning—a Saturday—as Roen was finishing breakfast, a special delivery letter came. So she poured another cup of coffee and sat down to read it in easier slowness. The previous evening Mark had been kept at the office. Often, when this happened, he wrote to her. She loved these letters. The phrases recurred in her thought, sweet and warm, like the perfume of a flower or the notes of a song.

This one today had an arresting message:

"It is now 12:30. Half an hour ago I passed your cottage. I drove slowly, longing to stop for a moment. I wanted to ask a question. "Last night you said a thing that came with bitter shock. You said, 'Don't make me think; let me have my precious interlude unstained by thought—'

"Roen, do you realize all you packed into that sentence? INTERLUDE! You mean then that we are to part? We cannot. We have not spoken of the future, but it is in my thoughts always, and though you fight it, it must be in yours. Roen, beloved, there is no future for either of us without the other. My future is yours, and yours is mine.

"It is for me to make this a fact. Be certain that I shall.

"I have one regret—the regret that I was not prophetic that I did not wait through years for you. But it was you always that I've loved; you always that I've sought. You and the miracle of love like yours. I have found you. You are mine and shall be so always. Nothing can alter this. All other claims are paltry compared to the supreme claim of your heart on mine and mine on yours. This is real. This will exist though worlds and laws were wiped away.

"On my honor and my goods an other has claim. But on myself—none. All that is living; all that laughs and has youth and joy within me belongs to you. The wonder that is you, Roen, rekindled me to life. To the wonder that is You, this received I belong. I would live and laugh dear Roen. I find it sweet to live and laugh. With YOU."

While she worked, Roen kept seeing Mark sitting in the low chair near the fire; reaching up and with flushed adoring eyes, clasping her arms. She grew almost oppressed with this seeking, happy image of him. When he so sought her, she wished that they could be lost—vanish eternally in one of these poignant moments.

He wanted to live and laugh. With her—Again and again during the lazy Saturday morning the phrase reechoed.

Towards noon Morse began dictating. He suddenly discovered half a dozen letters he wanted answered before the week passed.

There Was Silence, Then an Agonized Voice Cried' 'Stop'

They were working feverishly when the door of the next office banged. Came a sharp cry, immediately throttled—a frightened, gasping cry.

Ugly sounds followed this; the sound of a chair thrust aside; swift, terrified steps; a woman's furiously excited voice: "No, you don't! Take that! And that! And that!—! That, that and that!"

An appalling silence. Suddenly a low, agonized voice, "Stop!"

Roen recognized the voice of Florie Fisher, stenographer in the next office. A hoarse, frenzied, "Stop—On—"

The steps again, as though some one lurched blindly along the wall and was pushed by that incessant "No, you don't! Take that! And that and that!" Here, more exhaustive—sickening. Florie running. Like other pursuing.

Grace Morse stole to the partition. "We could" said he, turning pale. "That's Barrow's wife. She's beating Florie!"

Quiet. Broken with a gloating: "How do you like that! And that!"

No protest.

And the other: "Cry! Scream! I'll make you!"

Morse sprang to the door. "She'll kill her!"

Roen followed—leaden—her face gray.

They were confronted by a distraught figure standing on the threshold of the adjoining room—a woman brandishing a horsewhip, saying in a harsh whisper:

"That'll teach you to break up

'I Guess This Is the End,' Roen Said to Herself

She had stocky, florid, inarticulate Ned Barrows completely under her thumb. Barrows, who was married to a hot-tempered virago and who had three half grown children, was incumbed at a glance to Florie's lure.

Months ago rumors flew about. Everyone began sweetly to await some sordid scandal.

But this was brutal—this was revolting—bestial.

"Where were we?" said Morse. Then gruffly: "Oh, the devil—listen to that stampede. Dirty, unescaped Barrows to watch his step. With a wife like Emily Barrows on his trail—"

He listened—he went to the door and opened it cautiously, coming back with a smirk.

"She had sense enough to lock the door. Too bad she didn't do that an hour ago—"

Roen got up and took a drink of water as she looked by the small gilt image of her own face. She, too, had been beaten. She felt like blows on her flesh that shrill: "That'll teach you to break up homes! This'll teach you to win away Ned Barrows!"

She felt resentful to Florie Fisher. She was dragged down by Florie Fisher.

"It's not as though she loved him," she said in a faint tone. "She wants what she can get from him. She wouldn't look at Ned Barrows except for his money."

"What difference does that make?"

"If she cared for him and the affair was inevitable because of a great love, then it could only be incorrigible sorrowful. Florie has not even excuse. So it is hopeless."

Morse shrugged. "Angry wives don't inquire for motives. It may be a woman's whim to break up a love as a man. It doesn't justify her to the mass who do not do the world. She rates a whipping just the same whether her motive is love or advice."

Roen drew her pencil down the page. It made a long, shaky line. "Then you think," she pursued Morse blankly, "that he will encourage what not to encourage—that a wife should rescue her husband to another when the other loves him and he has won his love?"

"I don't know," said she, with a withering dryness in her heart, "but the other woman is pitiful—it is surely pitiful Possess on of an other without love, though ten times married, is immoral, is sordid."

Oh—let the letters go," said he abruptly.

She went over to the mirror and reached for her hat. She said to herself with a clammy, shivering opposition, "I guess this is the end—I guess it's ended."

Fads and Fashions

Quaintly Quilted are the newest one-string bridge slippers, the vamps of which have alternating stripes stitched in quilted design. The quarters are of the lighter shade and the binding, ball, spike heels and narrow strap are of the same tone as the darker stripes.

Shadowing Scarf Styles with shadow brush wood, hand-painted upon both ends of Shetland wool scarfs, fullwear fashions are ever offering something distinctly new. These lightweight Shetland scarfs are most effective with their deep hand-decorated borders.

A New Age "What's Trumpet" in favor to those of crepe de chine, when the latest novelty silk stockings, known as "bridge hose," have a heart, spade, club or diamond placed at the front, just above the ankle. Using card symbols as decorative motifs will probably only be acceptable to those women needing extreme kinds of short duration.

Roses by Other Names may smell as sweet, but roses of other fabrics than crepe de chine are not as smart for the large flowers that are to be worn very high on the shoulder of an afternoon or an evening frock for Summer. Chiffon or organdie roses are also worn, but are second in favor to those of crepe de chine.

Fire Escape or Balcony

The Story's the Same

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

LOVE has varied but little through the ages. There are, of course, variations in the game, caused by the changes of the years. In days of yore, the heart-sick cavalier went to untold risks to make possible his serenade to his loved one. Perhaps her family was engaged in a feud with his own parents. Perhaps her father ordered his guards to take him as a prisoner if they found him in the [illegible] these trivial details present him from nightly climbing her balcony to tell her of his love and adoration? No, the greater the peril, the greater the daring and the more worthy the success! And it is an old story that youth and love usually triumph over every obstacle and all opposition.

And today—[illegible] which walls a daring suitor must climb? Where are the guards he must escape? To youth a fire escape looks as many rungs as the medieval wall—and is just as romantic in aspect. As for guards—well, there is her family who may not countenance the serenade with smile—therefore, they are to be avoided. Perhaps the modern lover does not sing because—and if that [illegible] escape—most interests his loved one, and she is not shy in letting him know that.

'Curled Hands'; Parton Finds Jill's Kerchief at Meldreth's

own way, with an occasional interjection, "Jill's not an unmarried question or two, he told the story of the finding and securing of Jill. To no other man in th world except Honerton would he have recounted the adventure. Other men might have put a dubious interpretation upon an incident of which he had nothing to be ashamed, but Honerton had a singularly nice mind. Meldreth was not recounting the affair lightly. There was a curious hesitance in his speech now and then, especially when he was talking about Jill herself, as though he could not find words that were adequate to describe her.

"And I saw her off by the up train this morning," he concluded. "And—that's all?" asked Honerton. He had an idea Meldreth had not quite finished. Something else was disturbing his peace of mind.

"No, it isn't all." Meldreth answered shortly, in the manner of a man who shrinks to make a confession and get it over. "I spoilt dinner—before the end. I was bound to. Habit was too strong for me, I suppose. Habit and propinquity. I kissed her. It doesn't sound very devastating, but all the same, directly I'd done it I felt—a brute. When I had her in my arms I knew she was not the sort of girl you would like to have mixed up in a casual affair. Even if she had been, I couldn't have cared for her myself. I can't. I don't love that sort of girl. I'm not built that way. And I'm not the same of me as she had a few minutes before. Naturally, I couldn't help noticing how awfully pretty she was, and enjoying her being there—a charming girl. To make things worse, just at that moment, Parton, whom I'd sent off for the day as the best way of disposing of him, came back, because he said he'd forgotten a shopping list. He was lying, of course. The fellow's always spying on me. He ought to have been a sleuth, and instead, a valet.

"Of course I apologized to her and she was awfully decent. We parted friends. More than friends on my side, I can't explain, but that's how it is. In the storm, the queer gods blew to my door the very girl you were talking about last night—the sort of girl who could lead me to happiness."

This was a Meldreth only Honerton knew. He uttered a low groan. "And you're—not seeing her again?"

"No. I didn't ask her, naturally. One wouldn't choose to try to pass on the sort of girl you would like to have met under different circumstances to accompany one on the downward path instead. If I saw more of her, I should have had to tell her what I was. Only strange makes it women entirely happy. Even women outside the pale will tell you that and I never, never be free while Edna is alive."

"But if she divorces you?"

"She won't. She begins. Then she withdraws her instructions. It seems to amuse her. She never knows her mind, and she changes her sweet treats with her hats. And I'm not a position to—put her away. It's a deadlock all round. If I hadn't been for Jill—" He broke off. "Give me a week and I'll get all about her—with any luck. I'm going back to town on Monday, and over to Paris, I think."

Honerton put his hand on Meldreth's shoulder.

"Don't let yourself go, old chap. You won't find forgetfulness in town or anywhere else in the way you're thinking of."

Meldreth's mouth set sardonically again. Jill had gone out of his life. What on earth did it matter to his lost friend [illegible] how he set about forgetting her?

"Don't bother about me, Chris," he answered grimly, as he got into his car. "I'm too far on like a wide road to turn back."

But when [illegible] reached the cottage the thought of London or Paris and the [illegible] pictures of Kit [illegible] faded from his mind as a vision of Jill [illegible] coming up at the corners, carmined by nature only, with her bigwant air of calm and seeking youth. Jill, who had looked so beautiful unconscious on the couch . . . only a girl for all her poise and spirit . . . and in his care and keeping for that night. . . . She had been safe enough, after all, in being glad that much to be thankful for. He went on, reliving the few brief hours of their pleasant companionship. He even wrote a letter, and came back to it in bed and:

"It's pulling rain to have you here. The funny thing is it doesn't seem to be raining outside."

And she had answered:

"I know . . . but tomorrow it will seem quite too extraordinary that I ever was!"

It seemed extraordinary already—like a dream . . . Only the remains of breakfast laid for two and the bowl of flowers. Jill had arranged with her own deft hands vanished for its rearing.

He flung himself into a chair and gave himself up to moody thought.

By and by, Parton came in at the door, carrying a [illegible] Meldreth's dressing [illegible]

"Here's Parton!"

"Yes, sir, I did."

"I—I'm going back to town on Monday."

"Very good, your lordship."

Good Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHO could resist an appeal like this:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Have you ever been in love? If so, you will know, help me.

"He is a neighbor. We have met each other daily for about one year, but never uttered a word to one another. I, of course, fell in love. I am sure he cares a little bit.

"We talk now, but it's only a greeting. I want our acquaintance to develop into something strong and beautiful—something that will never fade. Please help your little friend. ZENA."

ZENA, dear, that is what every woman who really "cares" wants—affection that is strong and beautiful and unfading.

First of all, and foremost, be honest with your friend. Do not pretend or resort to vamping trickery, then there will be no disillusionment later on. Second, always look your prettiest and deadliest. Third, do not take yourself or your friendship too solemnly. Keep jolly and companionable.

Since he shows an interest in you, why do you not invite him to call on you some evening at your home? When he comes you can make a good friend—loyal, winsome, [illegible] companionable, leaving out all thought of sentimentality. Your friendship will grow and end as just to the extent that you two are truly consanal and bring out the best characteristics in each other.

Do not count on love. But appreciate and encourage just as much of his companionship as he gladly offers. Such friendships are beautiful, whether or not they ever deepen into love.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very much interested in your column, especially in the discussion of kissing, as it seems to be a problem everywhere.

I do not believe in kissing every Tom, Dick and Harry, but I cannot see any harm in kissing a very dear friend. In a way I agree with your correspondent who signed herself "A Modern" when she says, "Kiss if you want to" to the extent that is indicated—that is, in the case of a dear friend.

Best wishes to your column.

MARY.

I THANK you for your good wishes, Mary, dear!

The question of kisses is one each girl must decide for herself, is it not, according to her own convictions and experience?

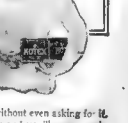
Kissing as a mere pastime between friendly acquaintances, of course, degrades the kiss, which is a symbol of love. I think you will find that when it comes to lasting friendship and marriage, the kind of man who makes a worth-while friend and looks forward to marriage thinks most of the kind of girl who refuses her kisses save where mutual love is established and proved.

Women's Oldest Problem

in hygiene disappearing —new way discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND

Registered Nurse



THE worries and fear of the uncertain hygienic ways of yesterday are rapidly passing. 8 in 10 better-class women employ a new way called Kotex.

Kotex discards like tissue. No laundry, no disposal bother.

Being 5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton "pads," it permits lightest gowns and frocks without danger. Dance, motor, go about for hours without a moment's doubt.

Deodorizes, too, thus ending all fear of offense. Doctors urge this way.

Many stores have Kotex already wrapped on counters, ready for you to pick up without even asking for it.

Try today and you'll never again risk uncertain old ways. Box contains 12. Be sure you get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

Parton's gratification was such that it found vent in words.

DAILY SHORT STORY

DUVAL'S COUP

By Louise Peple Armstrong

MRS. WYLAND HENDRICKS stood at the door of her drawing room and watched the young man beside her, who eyed the brilliant throng of her guests with interest.

"I don't want you under any circumstances to perceive a sense," she said, publicity would be direful. It is the reason to believe that [illegible] of the evening. [illegible] It would not be difficult for Delliott to secure one. But it is for you to whisper in my ear. We know what he's after—eyes."

The young man glanced significantly at the single string of pearls upon the curve of Mrs. Hendrick's white throat. She touched them lightly with her finger tips and smiled into his gray eyes. "A chal lenge to Delliott," said the lady lightly.

"A challenge," she repeated, a moment later, "and perhaps a snare too! Mr. Duval I'm putting great confidence in your vigilance."

"Thank you" replied the youth stiffly. "It will not be misplaced, madam."

Cecil Duval, the youngest detective on the force, felt strangely elated as he turned and looked at the crowds of richly dressed women and distinguished men who filled the spacious rooms of the Hendricks' mansion. He felt that Fortune was in the act of smiling upon him; had he not obtained the commission by the merest chance, when Mc Clellen was detailed for a robbery in the West End, and Hobson called home to a sick wife? Only through such unforeseen circumstances had he been put on this job. He swore he'd catch the polite gentleman crook red handed and hand him over at Headquarters.

No one seemed to know anything definite about Delliott. No one even knew exactly what the man looked like. He frequented the inmost circle of society however and never failed to beg an heirloom or some priceless article of feminine adornment. Queer that Mrs Hendricks should be so certain he'd be here tonight!

Duval wandered aimlessly through the rooms, glancing casually at each guest. No one knew that he been gray eyes had taken in every detail of their physiognomy, photographed a brain picture he could reproduce at will.

A girl in the east room smiled at him. He came suddenly from his abstraction as he voluntarily smiled back. She drew nearer and called to him over the heads of the crowd.

"I really believe you've forgotten me!" she said.

"Oh, no, I haven't," he responded eager and impulsively.

Somehow she was beside him a moment later, and they were walking toward the conservatory. The girl slipped a firm arm through his and regarded him gravely. She seemed to be guiding him, and Duval began after several steps to be exceedingly uncomfortable. He couldn't be side-tracked this way when he was supposed to be keeping an eye peeled for Delliott. And then, too, he was deliberately misleading this girl, she evidently thought him an old acquaintance.

They sat together on a little bench in the great conservatory, in a nook of palms and flowering plants He saw that she was very beautifully and expensively gowned, and yet her fresh loveliness appeared unspoiled. She seemed entirely to lack the blase air of sophistication he had so often noted in young society.

"You're wrong about me," Duval started to explain, remorseful now that he had pretended to know her anxious to be back on the job. "I'm not really——"

"Never mind about you," the girl interrupted. "I want to talk about the bad burglar Mrs. Hendricks expects here tonight. Helen Hendricks said a detective has been employed Isn't that thrilling? Would you know if you saw him—the detective, I mean? I've always been interested in detectives, they seem to lead such thrilling lives!"

She chatted on for several minutes, asking him questions, giving him no chance to answer any of them. Duval became more and more disconcerted

"Please let me explain," he finally burst out, then stopped in astonishment.

The girl had put her finger to her lips as a warning. She sat closer to his arms. "Pretend to be kissing me!" she commanded.

Moved by daring impulse, Duval obeyed with alacrity. None could say that his acting was not superb. She lay passive in his embrace, but her eyes blazed into his, so that presently he released her.

"Hush," she commanded again in a hoarse whisper.

There was a rustling sound at the far end of the conservatory Silently she arose and motioned him to follow. Treading stealthily behind her Duval saw that she kept a wall of the foliage between them and her prey. He was sure of this, and now he became seriously alarmed. What if the girl herself were a thief—a bobbed hair bandit—leading him on to attack and rob one of Mrs. Hendrick's guests?

"The man in the corner," she formed the words soundlessly with her lips. "Catch him quickly—put the bracelets on him!"

Duval bounded across the intervening space, caught the tall man who had been bending in a queer attitude above a bank of plants, seized him about and snapped the handcuffs upon his wrists. He did not stop to reason what he did, for something in her voice had compelled him to obey

"Evelyn Hendricks, are you crazy!" the shackled stranger cried

But the girl was busily digging in the soft loam of the century plant over which the man had been bending an instant before. With an exclamation of triumph she turned, holding aloft the string of pearls Duval had seen about her mother's neck early in the evening.

When the young detective handed his man over at headquarters a half hour later he cut short the congratulations of the force and hurried back to the Hendricks mansion to make a request of the tall footman whom he met at the door.

He was ushered into a little deep faced Mrs Hendrick's only daughter, Evelyn, sportswoman and society belle, very proud and dictatorial now in her dark beauty, her black eyes cold, forbidding.

"I came to thank you, and to say——" he began.

"Don't you think," she interrupted, "that the less said the better? You wanted the glory of getting Delliott. Well, I gave it to you. I happened to recognize him last week at a dinner dance. You see, years ago he was a servant in this neighborhood, and I've a memory for faces. You did remarkably well—in the end As to the rest, you needn't trouble to apologize." She flushed as she spoke and dropped her eyes

"But I'm not apologizing," Duval heard himself protesting "because I'm not really sorry I'm glad about that kiss. I'll always keep the memory of it—like a flower pressed into a book to remind one of a moment that has gone forever—a dream, that was perhaps foolish, but beautiful, nevertheless."

She raised her eyes and looked at him intently. "So that's the way you feel about it?" she murmured in a half-whisper.

"Why can't we be friends, after all?" he asked, boldly, eagerly. "After all, you know you're interested in detectives. They—they lead such thrilling lives"

"Perhaps," she conceded, and she held out her hand in frankness. "Perhaps we can, after all, Mr. Detective! But we won't go hunting any more burglars together again—just yet!"

And though she laughed, something he read in her eyes made his heart beat high!

Care for Child's Heart

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

DO not get the idea that most children are immune to heart disease, a notion that is all too prevalent among parents. I have before me the statement of Cumbis that two-thirds of the adult persons in Great Britain who suffer from heart disease and ultimately die of it, contract their trouble between the ages of five and fifteen. Nearly twenty thousand people die every year in Great Britain from this cause alone after undergoing long periods of illness, the misery of repeated breakdowns and pecuniary loss.

The State, any State, also loses through being deprived of the services of this class of cases and through having to support a large number of them. The problem is, therefore, one of increasing importance.

Its control means actually the control of the rheumatic child.

Rheumatism is an exceedingly long drawn out and chronic infection. All forms of it pass through three stages, the acute, the convalescent and the quiescent. Any attempt, therefore, at controlling the disease must be directed definitely against each of these three stages.

It has been shown by Bertram that, in the acute stage, efficient handling considerably reduces the risk of heart complications. Whereas 85 per cent. of children with acute rheumatism or chorea who were treated at home developed heart disease, only 24 per cent of those treated in hospitals developed it. Children's hospitals and those which have children's departments are perfectly competent to undertake the treatment of children who can stay in long enough.

The child's chance of recovery from rheumatic fever or chorea without damage to his heart depends on efficiency combined with. Two essentials are an adequate period of rest, and a graduated return to ordinary life. The treatment, therefore, demands a sufficient number of convalescent homes or rest hospitals in sunny and dry districts where children can receive medical supervision, graduated exercise and suitable education.

THE WITTY SAYINGS OF MEDBURY

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

THERE are so many confidence men in New York City that Grant's Tomb alone changes hands three or four times every day.

ONE fellow bought it last week and tried to have the occupants served with a dispossess notice.

HE figured that Mr. and Mrs. Grant were dodging their rent because they wouldn't answer the door.

BUT he didn't care. He had other real estate holdings in New York. He purchased the public library and secured an option on the aquarium.

HE could have bought the Brooklyn Bridge very cheap but he's saving up for the city hall.

THE man who sold him the municipal building charged him $200 extra for the pigeons.

HE only had 500 bucks left, but he spent it very wisely. He bought the Pennsylvania station.

AND the agent threw in a couple of ferry boats free of charge.

HE didn't have enough dough left, so the fellow took an I. O. U. for the Grand Central Terminal.

HE spent his last $50 for the privilege of putting up a toll gate on Riverside Drive.

HE was broken hearted because he ran out of money before he had a chance to buy any Fifth avenue busses.

HE telegraphed home for more dough while Central Park was still for sale.

IT was a bargain at $700 and he was afraid they might take it off the market.

HE paid the fellow a $60 bonus to hold it for him overnight.

THE agent also gave him a low price on the Hudson River.

HE explained to him, however, that the battleships would be extra.

THE United States Government took New York from the Indians and now the confidence men are selling it back to the farmers.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE trouble with modern marriage is that most people rush into it the moment their emotions begin to bubble, without waiting to see if they are going to "jell."

Alas, how easily a man is "fed up"! Nothing tastes so good to him, upon his return from a fishing trip, as an honest broiled steak; and nothing looks so good to him, upon his return from a lingering honeymoon trip, as his office desk!

A home, like a pest, is CREATED, not made. No woman can "make" a home out of sticks of mahogany and bolts of chintz, if the INSPIRATION is not there!

There would be far more sweetness and light in the average marriage, if husbands and wives would keep individual tubes of toothpaste and subscribe to separate newspapers. Just because you have agreed to share your joys and sorrows is no reason why you should have to share the talcum and the comic pages!

* * *

Nothing takes the heart out of a tired business man, at the end of a day, like the sight of his evening clothes and dancing pumps, all laid out for him.

Now that Paris has decreed the highly polished back for evening exposure, even the successful business girl will find it comforting to have a little husband around the house.

The modern girl's notion of an ideal husband is one who can be confined to a breakfast-nook, a den, one bureau-drawer, one hand-satchel and one hook in the hall closet.

Many a woman has married for a "harbor," only to find herself hung up for life in dry-dock.

How Will Business Fare in Second Half of Year?

By B. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Another mixed, seesaw week in business and securities. The arrival of Summer appears to have brought some seasonal slackening in industry.

THE OPENING of the second half of the year finds conditions little changed from those existing at new year.

The last six months have fulfilled reasonable but not extravagant expectations. The dispositon is to look for some slight recession in activity during coming months.

B. C. Forbes.

The professional manipulation the New York Stock Exchange has been so bold that something more than a "slight recession" may occur there. A warning may be in the growing difficulty experienced by underwriters in disposing of some of their less attractive security offerings.

NOTWITHSTANDING the frequent complaints of unduly slender profit margins, dividend increases continue to be announced daily. Increased payments far outnumber reduced payments. Tone are not confined to railroads, but embrace public utilities and quite a range of industrials. Notable exceptions are the oil industry, the woolen manufacturing industry, the cotton industry and, in some measure, the rubber industry.

THE STEEL trade is receiving fewer orders, but this condition can be changed overnight, previous experience has shown. An immediate production has been curtailed by most companies, a not unusual development at this season. The summer of workers laid off by Ford throughout the country is large, but the new Ford car should be in active production by the opening of Fall.

MIXED REPORTS come from retail merchants. An encouraging note, however, was struck at the week end by the largest wholesale dry goods house in America: "Current wholesale distribution of dry goods was ahead of last week's volume and exceeded that of the same week in 1926. Road sales were in excess of both a week ago and the corresponding period last year. Collections were about the same as for the corresponding week a year ago. A large number of customers were in market for the pre-inventory clearance."

EXPECT FLUCTUATIONS in call money rates this week. Dividend and interest payments on July 1 will break all records, thanks to our national growth, reasonably active business and the steady drift towards the corporate form of carrying on industry.

HAPPILY, no cities give promise of remaining dormant through the Summer. President Coolidge, correspondents say, strongly favors relegating political discussions to the background until Washington resumes activity in the Fall. Nothing has occurred to indicate that he will decline re-nomination.

AVIATION AS RAIL SIDELINE IS OPPOSED

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

Another problem is raised by Colonel Lindbergh in his study of the railroads develop aviation? This question is being discussed in carrier circles today. The railroad presidents, stock of whose companies are largely held in New England, are inclined to answer K in the negative.

Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific, wires: "I am not convinced that rail lines are the proper agency for aerial transportation. Both railway officers and men are united along conservative lines and have a big job to develop their own potentialities. They will observe this new departure with interest, but I doubt whether the railroads will take up this form of transportation as necessarily collateral to their present recognized and long established field of activity."

W. B. Storey Carl R. Gray

* * *

W. B. Storey, president of the Santa Fe, writes: "I do not consider the proposition feasible. It is true that railroads are engaged in transportation, but in only one kind of transportation. At one time many of the roads also engaged in the steamship business, but the government compelled them to sell their steamers and go out of business on the ground that the two kinds of transportation were essentially competitive. The same reasoning would hold with aviation."

* * *

Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Company is one of the very few lines having one abbreviation of its name in use among the railroad people and the ticket and other stock market circles. In board rooms you will invariably hear it referred to as Atchison or as the railroad men call it the Santa Fe. President Storey is known as one of the most interesting and successive executive speakers heard in Boston.

RADIO DIALOG

by William Rados

CLARA BOW has been reduced to $8,000 a week. After working hard all week all Colleen Moore gets is $19,000.

* * *

We got right in our car and drove around to interview the prominent radiolites. It was as we suspected. All the radio industry is trembling on the verge of a nervous fit. Everyone from announcers down expects to have his salary cut.

It is reported that henceforth Jimmie Gallagher will not get a cent under $5,000.05 for bringing on each week. We interviewed Oscar Mc-Swiggle, popular drugstore artist who sings at 4 p. m. each Fourth of July from GLUE. Oscar was approached with evident intentions of reducing his salary. But Oscar was adamant. "When I told them I was adamant," says Oscar, "they were astounded."

* * *

So are we, but we think a bottle of liniment will bring it about all right.

* * *

G. R. Sweezy, the Radio Doctor, would not be found at the office going up, no stops at the fifth floor, yes maam, furniture next side to your right, Mr. Sweezy has also discovered figuring on the back of an old envelope. It was his budget for 1928 since Mr. Sweezy's pay has been cut $75 a week.

Gravel MacFarraway, the Polish Tenor, reported no change. "I charge them $2.50 a performance and will take no less." (Editor's note: If all the artists showed the firm stand that Mr. MacNearus has displayed there would probably be no wage reductions.)

Willie Bite, chief assistant president of the radio singers association, reports a strike vote will be taken. The boys demanded double pay for hour with double time for overtime. And no announcements taken out, is met we will strike." "Not one station in the country will hear us unless we are awarded the following conditions: The time announced for the broadcast will be the time when we leave the office, we must be allowed an apprentice in case we forget something, and we must be garanteed at least 5,000 applause cards a week."

3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.

A Sacred Pool

Superstitious Hindus Drown in It

HINDUS BATHING IN THE SACRED AND FILTHY GANGES.

This picture, showing a small section of the sacred pool in the Ganges River, at Hardwar, reminds you that this earth is populated chiefly by the ignorant and superstitious.

In this pool of filthy water, Hindus bathe, believing that they gain spiritual advantage, whereas in reality, swallowing water on which corpses are allowed to float, they are absorbing diseases that spread from India to Western nations.

Every twelve years the Kumbh Mela Fair takes place, and then the "Sacred Pool" of dirty water becomes especially holy. And the Hindu lucky enough to be first to plunge into it, on the day of the Fair, acquires very conspicuous "merit."

If in addition to being first into the pool, the superstitious Hindu can swim seven times around the Gangadwara Temple, his merit is enormously increased. In fact, he may stop worrying, for the god in which he believes will see to it that everything is O. K. so far as HE is concerned. He has bathed in sacred dirty water, swam seven times around the temple, what more can any god ask? At least, that is what the HINDU thinks.

When the fair is on, fanatics from all over India rush to the sacred pool, and the British government ruling India and trying to keep the people in order has a busy time. The population of the little city of Hardwar suddenly increases from 20,000 to 500,000. That sudden congestion is bad enough, but the violent struggle of the crowd to be first into the sacred pool makes the danger greater.

This year thirty-five men and women were killed in the crush caused by the effort to be the first into the water.

In addition, much trouble was caused by the presence of 2,000 policemen, NOT Hindus, sent to march up and down near the sacred pool and look out for those in danger of drowning. These policemen wore boots made of leather. Hindus believe it is a crime to kill cattle, and blasphemy that men with leather boots should stand around the sacred pool. Besides, Hindu women, bathing in the pool, were shocked as to their modesty by the presence of the policemen. What difference a few policemen could make with tens of thousands of male Hindus around was not stated. There is no accounting for modesty.

This picture shows how little you can expect for the present from a human race in which hundreds of millions believe in hideous superstitions. Also, it shows the danger of epidemic, when the same hundreds of millions that insist on putting corpses, no matter what killed them, afloat on the Sacred Ganges, then bathe in that water, subsequently spreading disease.

Light for the Home

Almost Given Away, IN HOLYOKE

Beginning on the first day of the coming month, the price of electricity for domestic purposes in the city of Holyoke will be 4½ cents a kilowatt hour.

The present price is 5 cents.

The Holyoke rate is and will be the LOWEST IN NEW ENGLAND.

The Holyoke plant is OWNED BY THE PUBLIC, managed by a Municipal Gas and Electric Department.

When the city took over the service, twenty-five years ago, the price of electricity in Holyoke was 18 cents a kilowatt hour. Consumers had to wait two years for the first reduction, but it was worth waiting for; the price dropped to 10 cents. In 1908, there was a reduction to 6 cents and about one year ago another drop to 5 cents.

POWER rates in Holyoke are also the lowest in this part of the country. Users of current in lots of more than 1,000 kilowatt hours in the month have been buying it for 3½ cents. Even this rate is to be reduced and the local manufacturers saved an additional $35,000 a year.

There may be instances wherein public management is marked by too much politics, and so by extravagance and inferior service, but plainly Holyoke has not been so afflicted. There has been no wastefulness in Holyoke and no one has charged the Gas and Electric Department with inefficiency.

Nor will industries in search of a new home be frightened away from the Paper City by the tax rate; that, too, is amongst the lowest.

Public ownership of electric plants has been successful in so many Massachusetts communities that the "antis" make little headway here. One of their favorite pastimes is listing the towns and cities which try municipal ownership and abandon it. The Bay State seldom figures in these lists and for good reason.

The next opponent of public ownership who is heard around here should be called upon to explain Holyoke's low electric light rate, low power rate and low tax rate. On the record, the city at the foot of Mt. Tom appears to have demonstrated that public ownership and public management CAN be successful.

WHY NOT CHECK THE NUMBER OF TAXI DRIVERS WHO OBEY THE MOTTOES FOR OTHERS THEY DISPLAY ON THE MOTOR BACKS?
WE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW THE EXACT HEIGHT OF SOME OF THE MOUNDS IN AND AROUND PARK SQUARE THAT MOTORISTS ARE OBLIGED TO DRIVE OVER.

DON'T GIVE UP; KEEP ON TRYING

By DR. FRANK CRANE

WHATEVER has happened to you, don't give up.

Do not admit that circumstances are more powerful than you.

Though your head be bloody it should not be bowed.

You may have had financial losses and the accumulations of years may have been swept away, possibly by the treachery of some friend. What of it? Tighten your belt and go at it again.

Your health may be impaired. What of it? Other people have had discouragements and have lived bravely through them. The world is full of unsung heroes who have met with reverses and yet keep up a brave front.

Keep your flag flying. The bankrupt merchant or the disillusioned youth may see no escape but suicide, but those who are wiser tackle the problem again.

There is no great teaching that does not instruct us that we can rise upon our faulty past and climb the stairs to a finer future.

No more damnable gospel was ever preached than that for you or any man or woman there is no hope.

If you have sinned, if you have made mistakes, rise up! Shake off the past and face the future. There is no man living but what has committed some errors. We can allow the burden of life to plunge us into despair or we can shake it off and seek other fields.

The world is wide and if there is any one thing that both religion and philosophy teach it is that we can rise upon the wreck of our dead selves and enjoy that which remains.

You don't know what is around the corner and no man can tell what the future has in store for him.

Be a thoroughbred and keep up your courage, even though the battle may be against you.

Many a person has given up when success lay just ahead of him. If you can't do anything else, hold on. Believe in yourself, believe in life, believe in your star. If none of these beliefs can be proved to be sound their effect upon your character at least is sound, and one who is dominated by a persistent belief in his success is much more liable to have a sure hand and a good eye than the one who doubts himself.

Someone has said that you are never going to succeed in life in anything, mental, moral or physical, until you have stricken from your hands and heart and brain the shackles of fear.

What we want in this world is something to tone us up, to put us at our best, and fear is just the opposite of this.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

HUMANE

GEORGE M. HEATHCOTE of NEWTON, attorney and member of the board of aldermen, is a lover of horses. He owns several of them, and tries to protect their interests when opportunity arises. It is mainly due to his efforts that the city of NEWTON has decided to humanely destroy eleven horses in the service of the street department which have been declared unfit for use.

RETIRED

Alumni of WALTHAM HIGH SCHOOL found something lacking at the recent graduating exercises. It was the genial countenance of PA. THOLMAN JOSEPH F. FLOOD, who for twenty-six successive years had performed duty at the annual high school function, at the request of the school authorities. This year, however, found PATROLMAN FLOOD'S name on the retired list.

HISTORICAL

FRANCIS X. TYRELL, erstwhile member of the State Board of Economy and Efficiency, stepped in front of the gilded horseshoe near "Hoo Ley," in Newspaper row, and accosted ATTORNEY LEO HARLOW "Let me tell you about the Battle of Chelsea Creek in the days preceding the Battle of Bunker Hill," began TYRELL, as he pulled out all stops and gave a full organ recital of the deeds of valor of the early Americans. Harlow nearly lost his train.

Only those that have needed a medico desperately, and have been unable to locate or to reach one willing, can appreciate the worth of a physician who will rise agreeably from his bed at 3 A. LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I KNEW those American girls wouldn't let young Red corner the sky. Here they come! Listen—Dear Elsie:

What do you think about girls for aviators? I believe that the girls should be allowed to serve in the aviation corps. England has lady aviators. Won't you please write something about this in your column?

I believe that our girls should have equal rights with our men for the service of our country and I'm sure they would be far superior to men. MARY ANDREWS VIETRI, 9 Arnold avenue, Newport, R. I.

"Equal rights in service to our country—" is that what you want, Mary, dear?

But why clamor for equal rights when women have always held all records for the most valuable service that can possibly be rendered by any class of citizens?

"Pooh!" says Mary. "What have men ever been allowed to do for our country? Of course, they could brave—just as brave as Lindbergh or the boys who went to Ireece—but no one will give them a ence."

Dear child, ever since the beginning of the world women have been doing things that make gallant ung Lindbergh's record look like dd's play—facing great risks t would have turned the hearts of the A. E. F. cold with terror.

o non-stop flights which man may er stage can equal the risk and any and black loneliness of childbb.

o scientific discovery or mechani- creat, no financial manipulation onetorious campaign can ever give ods country treasure a hundredth pa as valuable as that which is orated by American women ever hour of the day, without recog nis or reward.

humble, obscure little mothers who go down into the Valley of the Shadow of Death that humanity may be born—theirs is the bravest venture, theirs the most radiant dawn!

Think of that, little Mary, when the glamor of Lindbergh dazzles your eyes and you sigh because you are not a man. Lindbergh was brave, gloriously brave—but Lind-bergh's mother was braver.

He gave his country a record in speed—

She gave her country a MAN!

"We!" laughed Lindbergh to his "Spirit of St. Louis" as they sped through the night. Partners of steel, those two!

"We!" whispered Lindbergh's mother to God, as she clung to His hand in the dark.

Do not envy men, Mary. Do not envy those women who will inevitably choose the lesser thing and don the aviator's helmet.

They will fly a little way into the clouds. But you, when your time is come, will mount into Heaven itself in the greatest non-stop flight.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

We work, it is true, for the whole year's length and find joy in the tasks at hand. In the zest of our labor we spend our strength, towns are builded and rivers spanned. We are happy all day the things we do, be it effort of arm or brain; it is only when all man's toil is through that happiness he has cherished wanders, seeking all joy. Which our wage may bring is the joy of the thing we build; in the urge of creation our pulses sing and our beings are stirred and thrilled. But only for love can we do our best, and not for the price we earn, nor yet for the rapture that stirs the breast when the fires of creation burn. It is only for love that the great lights dawn and that all of us do our best.
